SNAKE VENOM IS COSTLY

French Physicians Capturing Rattlers and Copperheads.

WORK IS DANGEROUS

The Poison to be Used as a Cure for Malignant Fevers. It is Worth $2000 per Ounce.

HOW THE VENON IS EXTRICATED

Wilkes-Barre, July 12—For the purpose of extracting poison from the fangs of the snakes and using it in experiments to find a cure for malignant fevers, Dr. Walter M. Atkinson and his assistant, Dr. J. L. Engle, of the Institute Pasteure, of Lille, France, are now in the mountains of this State hunting snakes. The search is for copperheads and rattlesnakes exclusively, and the poison obtained from their fangs is to be used in the experiments at the laboratory in Lille.

The first step is, of course, the catching of the snake alive. This is done by means of a snare of fine silver wire, as flexible as a piece of thead. This wire, one end of which is made into a slip-noose, is attracted to the end of a stick some four of five feet in length, and when a snake is located this noose is slipped over its head. The slighest pressure of the snake will draw it tight, and in this manner is often carried for miles until the cage is reached, when it is thrust inside and the lid closed and locked.

When a sufficient number of reptiles have been captured the extraction of the venom is the next step. This, on account of the great danger, has of necessity to be done with extreme care. A thin glass funnel, about three inches in diameter, is secured, over the mouth of which is stretched a piece of sterilized, wide-mesh gauze, fastened in place by a rubber band

The cage containing the snakes has a small opening in it. When this is opened they will try to make their escape, and as they do so they are grasped by the hand, just back of the head, and held firmly but gently by the operator. Snake and gauze-covered funnel are gradually brought nearer and nearer until the snake's head has approached within two or three inches of the mouth of the funnel, when a slight, quick pressure of the doctor's hand angers the reptile and it strikes the first object in view and sinks its fangs into the mashes of the gauze.

The commercial value of the venom is $30,000 per pound, or $2000 per ounce, Dr. Atkinson expects to secure about $3000 worth from his Summer's work,

While the use of venom secured from reptiles as an antidote is not new, its use for malignant fevers is.

Dr. Atkinson carries a set of surgical instruments with him whenever he is out hunting snakes and his method of treating a snake bite is very interesting.

Berry-pickers Meet Bears.

A party of seven Lock Haven men left Friday morning at sunrise for the Scootac regions in quest of huckleberries, the objective point being Tottenham hollow, where the bushes are laden with more than an ordinary crop, and the berries are of exceedingly large size. At 6 o'clock they arrived and at once set to work gathering into their pails and baskets full and plenty of what they sought. No incident out of the ordinary occurred until nearly an hour after they were stripping the fragile branches, when one of the men noticed a rustling in the bushes but 30 yards ahead of the berry-pickers. All were at once on the alert and an investigation was made, which resulted in them being confronted with three bears that were leisurely partaking of their early morning meal from the well filled bushes. The surprise was mutual, and just what to do next was at once decided by the bears, as upon noticing the intruders they scampered along the hillside with all possible haste.

The berry-pickers were evidently not much frightened at this sudden meeting with the bears as they continued to pick berries and brought home with them over 100 quarts.

Those comprising the party were Ned Wagner, Zach Leiser, David Wilson, Timothy O'Connell, John Leiser, Everett Johnson and Earl Shoemaker.

DEATH AT STATE COLLEGE.

A Resident of that Place Passes Away After a Short Illness.

Abram Ronks McCullom, who with his wife and daughter resided at the Beta Theta Pi fraternity house in State College died at that place Tuesday afternoon after a brief illness. Mr. McCullom has been employed at his trade as a wagon maker and was taken ill while at work last Friday and was sick from that time until his death Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock. He had been ill for some time through a complication of diseases but the direct cause of his death was apoplexy.

The deceased was born in Glasgow, Scotland, and early in life came to this country to make his home. For many years he was a resident of Central City [Milesburg] and worked at his trade there. On September 20th, 1879 he was married to Miss Mary C. McKinley, at Milesburg, who with one daughter survives him. Mr. McCollom had been residing in State College for about ten years and was a man well liked by those who made his acquaintance. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and a veteran of the Civil war.

The funeral was held from the house Thursday afternoon, Rev. Snavely being in charge of the services. Interment was made at Pine Hall.

Bottomfield—McTigue

The marriage of Mr. Joseph Bottomfield, of Bellefonte, to Miss Sarah McTigue, of Philipsburg, was the occasion of much surprise to Mr. Bottomfield's many friends. The wedding was a very quiet affair and took place at the parish residence of the St. John's Catholic church, Rev. Father McArdle performing the ceremony.

The groom is one of Bellefonte's promising young men and has for several years been employed at the undertaking and furniture store of Frank E. Naginey. He had been trying to keep this affair from his friends but before the ceremony was over the secret was out and they were ready to celebrate the marriage. The large delivery wagon used by Mr. Naginey was accordinly decorated and the bride and groom were captured and given a ride over the streets of the town amid the ringing of bells and the cheers of bystanders.

Mr. and Mrs. Bottomfield have the best wishes of their friends for a happy and prosperous married life.

Educators End Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Pennsylvania State Educational association, which closed at State College Thursday noon, was one of the most successful ever held by the association, the important questions discussed adding to the interest. Over 400 teachers and instructors were enrolled during the convention. One of the important questions brought before the meeting was that on "Child Labor," on which an excellent paper was read by W. Scott Nearing. It was considered of such vital interest that it was further discussed by others of the instructors present. Among the questions discussed Thursday forenoon was that of "Forward Children," and "Nature Fakirs and the Child." A strong plea was made for the teaching of agriculture and physics in the high schools. The selection of the place for holding the convention next year was left with the executive committee

Lovers Wedded After 45 Years.

An interesting event of the Fourth at Sunbury was the marriage of Isaac Lahr of Herndon, and Mrs. Susan Derr of Sunbury, after a separation of 45 years. The ceremony took place at 4 o'clock in the afternoon at the home of the bride's son Harvey Derr, of Line street, Sunbury Rev. R. C. Deibert, of the Second United Evangelical church, officiated.

It is seldom that a romance as interesting as this attaches itself to a wedding and gives it such additional meaning. Forty-five years ago in their young days the couple were lovers. A coolness sprang up between them, due no doubt to a lovers quarrel, and they drifted apart. Both married and settled down in different parts of the country. Now, after both had been bereaved they were accidentally thrown together and reaffirmed their former love and plighted their troth.

Died in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Sara Campbell a sister of Mrs. P. W. Fisher of Zion, died in Philadelphia Friday evening at 9 o'clock, following an operation. She was the widow of the late George Campbell and and formerly resided at Milesburg. Her age was about 55 years, and she is survived by three daughters and two sons. The remains were brought to Bellefonte on Tuesday for burial.

VIOLENCE AT CHESTER

Two More Cars Were Dynamited on Monday Evening.

CAR BADLY WRECKED.

Lives of the Passengers Were Imperiled and Latest Outrages Have Aroused Officials to Action.

MAY RECALL STATE CONSTABULARY.

Three months to a day after the inauguration of the strike of the Chester street car men, two successful attempts were made Sunday night to blow up cars belonging to the Chester Traction Company, and in each instance the man or men who placed the exposives on the rails escaped.

The first attempt was made shortly after 9 o'clock at Third Street and Concord Avenue, in the city limits of Chester. The second wreck took place on the Chester Pike at Huron Avenue, in Norwood in both instances the cars were badly damaged by the explosion, the one in Chester being due to a cap on the rails and the Norwood accident being caused by a stick of the explosive placed beneath the track.

Although the cars were badly shattered only one person was seriously injured. Deputy Sheriff Meyers, a passenger on the Philadelphia-bound car, receiving cuts from flying glass and bruises from being thrown to the floor of the car.

Ever since the strike of the men employed by the Chester Traction Company there have been scenes of violence, but last night's attempt to wreck two cars at different places on the line is one of the most serious within the last month. The act was so desperate and imperiled so many lives that the officials are using every effort to obtain a clew to the authors.

The wreck at Norwood was most spectacular. The car was almost demolished, one side being entirely blown off and the running gear crippled. There were fifteen passengers on this car, six of whom were women.

So quiet has been the situation for the last few weeks that the officers who had been assigned to ride on the cars have been taken off and this may have furnished the strike sympathizers with the chance to cause Sunday night's accidents.

James L. Mulhollan.

James L. Mulhollan, an aged resident of Bellefonte, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. C. C. Shuey, Monday evening after a lingering illness. Last spring he fell on an icy pavement and injured his back and from that injury developed lumbago and kidney trouble from which he had been suffering for the past three months. For the past few weeks he had been confined to his bed, his condition growing worse until he was called away Monday evening at 10 15 o'clock.

The deceased was born at Karthus, Clearfield county, July 25, 1827, and would have been 81 years of age on his next birthday. When about 18 years of age he came to Bellefonte and learned the machinist trade, and for a great many years was employed by Todd & Duncan, W. P. Duncan & Co., and Jenkins & Lingle, as that firm chaged from time to time. About fifteen years ago, shortly after the death of his wife, Mr. Mulhollen retired and has since been making his home with his daughters, Mrs. C. C. Shuey in Bellefonte and Mrs. Andrew Stover in Curwensville.

He was a member of the Methodist church and a regular attendant at the services until his illness prevented. During the Civil war he served his country valiently and endured the hardships of the soldier's life. He was a member of Grege Post No. 95 of Bellefonte.

Surviving him are six children as follows: W. H., of Clearfield; Mrs. Andrew Stover, of Curwensville; R. W., of Altoona; Mrs. T. A. Ardell and Mrs. C. C. Shuey, of Bellefonte, and Mrs. S. R. Rilling, of Altoona.

The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon at 2 30 o'clock from the home of C. C. Shuey and services were conducted by Rev. James B. Stein. Interment in the Union cemetery.

CENTRE—CLINTON LEAGUE

The Leaders Lose and Tailender Win the Games on Saturday.

While all the teams in the Centre and Clinton league remain in the same positions the percentage of the leaders was decreased while that of the Mill Hall team at the bottom was again tied with the Woolpickers. Howard and Snow are still tie for third place with an increased percentage. Two of the scores in Saturday's game were close while the Coal Barons had a walkover with the Woolpickers.

The Snow Shoe team went down to Woolrich Saturday where they captured an easy game from the Woolpickers having scored 7 runs and kept the Woolpickers from scoring during the game.

The Mill Hall team played at Orvis and had to work for the game which they landed there. The teams were in good trim and the game was an interesting one. The score was 7 5 in Mill Hall's favor.

The contest at Howard with the Beech Creek team was a matched game and the close score at all times during the game made it an interesting one. The Howard heavy hitters had a day off and good work by the pitchers and fielders kept the score down to 4-3 with the Millionaires the winners.

Boy's Arm Torn Off.

Arthur Andrew Fye, the 9-year-old son of John Fye of Snydertown, had his right arm torn off Thursday afternoon by being caught in a shaft. Young Fye is employed at the stave mill of McNitt and Hyett at Snydertown and usually works in the yard piling staves. About 3:30 o'clock he went to get a drink and as was his custom passed through the mill to get the water. On his return he was passing the grind stone which is run by a belt from the shaft. In some manner his sleeve caught in the shafting and the boy was whirled around the revolving shaft until his right arm was torn off just above the elbow. Dr. McCormick was called to dress the injured member and later he was taken on the train and brought to the Bellefonte hospital.

Persons who saw the young man state that he stood the ordeal better than most any grown up person would. Coming to Bellefonte he sat on a seat and did not show any evidence of pain, but before reaching town he began to get sick. The accident is a very sad affair for the young man as the loss of an arm will greatly handicap him in life.

Bitten by a Copperhead Snake.

A young son of Albert Kling, a farmer living one mile west of Mackeyville, was bitten on the hand by a copperhead snake Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock while picking raspberries. The young lad did not see the reptile, and after he reached under the bush, he felt a sharp pain, which felt as though he had been stung by a bee. He hurried to his home and told his father of the occurrence. Mr. Kling and the boy then returned to the spot where the boy was bitten and discovered a large copperhead snake coiled under the bush.

The poisonous reptile was quickly dispatched and a handkerchief was tied about the boy's arm so as to keep the poison from spreading through the body In the meantime the arm became swollen to abnormal proportions and the flesh turned a purple color. It was several hours before Dr. J. M. Dumm, Mackeyville, was summoned, who gave treatment to the boy and hopes are entertained that there will be no serious results.

They Beat at Retreat.

William McKinsey, proprietor of the St. Cloud hotel, Houtzdale, with twenty-three of his friends, have returned from a fishing trip to Orvis. "Billy" reports that while he and Dr. Dale, of Houtzdale, were busy fishing one day they heard a rustle in the bushes ahead of them, and looking up they beheld a big bear standing at the water's edge in the act of taking a drink from the sparkling stream. At the same juncture they heard the noise of a big rattler nearby, and it is needless to say "Billy" was not long in taking a sneak, with the Dr. following close at his heels—Philipsburg Journal.

BUSINESS MEN'S PICNIC

Will be Held This Year at the Famous Hecla Park

TUESDAY AUGUST 18

Meeting of the Executive Committee Held at the Brockerhoff House Tuesday was Largely Attended.

LARGE DELEGATION FROM CLINTON CO.

The first annual meeting for 1908 of the Centre and Clinton County Business Men's Picnic Association was held at the Brockerhoff House, Bellefonte Tuesday July 14th at 6 p. m. It was largely attended and very enthusiastic. The object was to make arrangements for the annual day's outing of the Business men of the two counties.

The Clinton county delegation arrived on the regular train over the Central Railroad at 5 o'clock and returned home on a special train at 10 o'clock. The business meeting was held in the parlor of the Brockerhoff house at 6 o'clock and was called to order by President, A. C. Mingle. The minutes of the previous meeting were read by Secretary J. C. Meyer after which he called the roll. There were 39 present as follows:

Joel A. Herr, Ceder Springs; T. J. Smull, Mackeyville; Hayes Stewart, Island; John R. Thompson, Salona; D. H. Stoner, Mill Hall; Capt. S. H. Bennison, Howard; T. B. Buddinger and M. D. Kelly, Snow Shoe; Philip D. Foster, State College, G. W. Fredericks, Torrance Shearer, P. P. Rittman, Mayor W. H. Stevenson, P. S. Kift, George W. Mason, A. L. Merril Newton Dunkle, F. E. Harder, George W. McDonald all of Lock Haven; Frank E Naginey, Harry Otto, John M. Bullock, Frank Montgomery, DeLaun Stewart, Robert Cole, A. C. Mingle, J. Will Conley, J. C. Meyer, S. Krumrine, J. D. Sourbeck, Hard P. Harris, Frank Warfield, all of Bellefonte.

The press of the two counties was represented as follows:

D. I. McNaul, the Lock Haven Democrat; U. A. Xuder, the Lock Haven Express; S. W. Smith, Centre Hall Reporter; T. H. Harter, of the Gazette; Francis Speer, of the Centre Democrat and E. C. Tuten, of the News and Republican.

The first thing in order was the election of officers for the ensuing year. The following were chosen:

President—T. J. Smull, of Mackeyville.

Vice President—C. F. Montgomery, of Bellefonte.

Treasurer—G. W. Fredericks, of Lock Haven.

Secretary—J. C. Meyer, of Bellefonte.

It was unanimously decided to hold the picnic this year and at the usual place Hecla Park. After considerable discussion, the date was fixed for Tuesday August 18th.

O. E. Miles, of Milesburg, and H. G. Evans of Lock Haven have dropped out as members of the Executive Committee and their places will likely be filled at the next meeting.

Mayor Stevenson of Lock Haven, moved that the Repaz band, of Williamsport, be secured for one of the attractions of the picnic, but this was referred to the Music committee. Mr. T. B. Buddinger made a plea for the Snow Shoe band, and some of the Clinton county delegation wanted the Lock Haven band.

The President appointed practically the same committees as last year. The Finance committee met and reported that they had $600 for amusements. The different committees will be notified in a few days just how much they will each have at their disposal.

While waiting for the supper and to pass the time away several present were called on for speeches. Among those who responded were the baby members of the committee Mayor Stevenson, the Republican Reform Mayor of Lock Haven who made quite a hit.

Philip S. Kift gave a little talkfest and showed himself to be a very pleasant talker. Others who responded were Joel A. Herr, Frank Montgomery, T. J. Smull, D. I. McNaul and Robert Cole.

Dinner being served, put an end to the talkfest, and all proceeded to the dining room, where mine host Ray had prepared an elegant chicken supper for the hungry committeemen, and the way the good thing disappeared was strong evidence that it was A No 1.

Dinner being over the committee met again and tendered a vote of thanks to Frank Warfield for his generous entertainment which all so heartily enjoyed.

It was decided to hold the next meeting of the Executive Committee at the Irvin House Lock Haven on Thursday July 30 h at 4:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Henry Swartz.

Mrs. Henry Swartz, a highly esteemed resident of Philipsburg, died at her home in that place Thursday morning at two o'clock. She had been ill for several months but her death came unexpectedly, heart failure being the cause.

The deceased was born in New Berlin Snyder county, on February 18, 1846 making her age over 62 years. On November 3, 1861, she was married to Henry Swartz at Hublersburg. The husband and two children, John and Bessie, wife of Edward Fish, both of Philipsburg, survive her. She also leaves two brothers R. K. and Curtis H. Wilson, of Lock Haven.

Prior to moving to Philipsburg about nineteen years ago the family resided in this place and were well known citizens. Mrs. Swartz was a member of the Methodist church for many years and had many friends in Bellefonte during her residence here.

Services were held at the home in Philipsburg Thursday afternoon and the remains were taken over the N. Y. C. train to Hublersburg where the funeral was held Friday afternoon.

A Welcome Rain.

With the increasing heat and humidity Saturday and Sunday the desire for a good shower was increased. Early Sunday morning there was evidence of a warm day ahead and by three o'clock in the afternoon the thermometer registered 95 in the shade. About this time dark clouds appeared and the impending storm gave relief to those who were suffering from the intense heat. The storm broke upon us about four o'clock when a high wind arose and carried with it great clouds of dust that filled the eyes of every person who chanced to be out. The wind blew so strong that branches were broken from the trees and paper and other light stuff lying about were carried along with the gale. The rain which followed the wind storm cooled the atmosphere and the evening was quite cool and pleasant.

Mrs. Mary Ann Love.

Mrs. Mary Ann Love, widow of the late Thomas Love died in Pittsburg as the result of a complication of diseases. The remains were brought to Bellefonte on the 1 25 train Monday and interment was made in the Union cemetery.

Mrs. Love was born at Warriorsmark, Pa. on Feb. 24th, 1839, and was 69 years old on her last birthday. She had been a resident of Hublersburg, but went to visit her daughter Mrs. R. H. Seibert, at Wilkinburg last September. She was a member of the Reformed church.

The following children mourn the loss of their mother, Mrs. R. H. Seibert, of Wilkinsburg; D. F., of Pittsburg; John of Altoona; Mary of Homewood; Mrs. Jennie Verner, of Chicago; Annie of Homewood, and James of Cleveland, O.

Death at Sandy Ridge.

Mrs. Mary M. Neff, widow of H. K. Neff, died on Friday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Lawrence L. Brown, at Sandy Ridge. For many years she had resided in Huntingdon with her husband and the remains were taken there on Monday for burial.

A son, Julian A., of Altoona also survives. Mrs. Neff had been a member of the Presbyterian church for many years.

Lightning Struck Swimmers

Wishing to experience the novelty of being in the water during a storm, J. R. Audley Lindsey and James Quenn went swimming in the Allegheny river at East Brady Sunday afternoon while a heavy storm swept the valley. A bolt of lightning was carried by a pipe line into the river and both were killed.

Roy Spence and Earl Paxton of Stealton, were rowing across the river at that place Sunday afternoon in a steel skiff when a bolt of lightning struck Spencer and killed him instantly. Paxton was knocked to the bottom of the boat but not badly hurt. The steel skiff is supposed to have attracted the lightning.

How the Ride of a Gallant Young Man Saved the Day

IMPORTANT MESSAGE

Carried by Stephen W. Pomeroy Enabled Gen. Mad to Perpare for Lee's Invasion of Pennsylvania

HOW GOV. CURTIN WAS NOTIFIED

A visit of Rev. S. W. Pomery, a former pastor of the Mt. Union Presbyterian church, to that town for the dedication of a new church, recalls to the Mt. Union Twice the following interesting piece of history.

He was with his regiment in the fierce fight at Fredericksburg in 1862. He had been discharged at the expiration of his enlistment, shortly before the invasion by general Lee in June of 1863. General Lee occupied Chambersburg as his headquarters. He had one corps at Carlisle and near Harrisburg. The other third was at York, Hanover and Wrightsville. S. W. Pomeroy was then 26 years old, tall, athletic and fearless. He had gone into the rebel lines at Chambersburg. Lee had heard of the approach of Meade's army on the east side of the mountains. He conceived the idea of rushing his army through the mountains and falling upon Meade's corps and destroying them before they could concentrate. Judge Kimmell was one of Franklin county's foremost men and he had a mind to help his country if opportunity should offer. Lee had ordered that part of his army at Carlisle and Harrisburg march to Chambersburg, as they reached that town they were turned westward over the pike toward Gettysburg. Judge Kimmell knew this would bring on a collision, and he knew it was vital that Meade should know. He therefore prepared a dispatch telling of this concentration and eastward march and called for a volunteer to attempt to carry it to Port Royal on the Pennsylvania railroad, with all speed and telegraph it to Governor Curtin. No one would undertake it. Some one had seen young Pomeroy in town who knew him, and told Judge Kimmell that if he undertook it, he would do it, and he believed he would. He was found and piloted to Judge Kimmel, who read the dispatch to him, and then sewed it in his pantaloon buckle strap, and Stephen W. Pomeroy started. He had to run the picket line the first thing. He was halted, but managed to quickly disappear from the picket without a chance for his fire. For ten miles it was a race on foot in a blazing June sun. Reaching home near Roxbury he obtained a horse and galloped at full speed until his horse failed, and securing another he rode on the gallop to a farm house on the way, where a dear girl lived, whom he loved. While he ate some food her horse took the place of the one fatigued, and in a few minutes he was out in the darkness and at a dead gallop reached Port Royal as the telegraph operator was about to close his office at midnight. The dispatch was cut from its hiding place and sent to Gov. Curtin, who at once sent it to the War Department at Washington, where it was at once sent to Gen. Meade, then about to cross the Maryland line into Pennsylvania. With his corps widely separated and marching on different roads, they they might have fallen an easy prey to Lee's concentrated army. But Meade had a day's notice and this day enabled him to defeat Lee's purpose.

S. W. Pomeroy's ride was more important to the world, and this Union, than any ride in history. Paul Revere's ride and Sheridan's ride, were important; but Pomeroy's ride was vital to this nation and we believe to the world.

Fire at Axe Mann.

Monday night about twelve o'clock the house occupied by Mrs. Clara Lucas and four children, at Axe Mann, caught fire and was burned to the ground. The origin of the fire is unknown and Mrs. Lucas barely escaped with her children, all their clothes and furniture having been burned. The building was owned by John White, who carried a small insurance.

Mrs. Lucas is a poor woman and with her four small children to care for makes the loss a severe one indeed. She was in Bellefonte on Thursday and many of the Bellefonte business men and others contributed clothing and money for the assistance of unfortunate woman and her children.

The motion was seconded by Mr. Musser and carried.

The Undine Parade.

The Undine Fire company parade Friday evening marked the beginning of the celebration of the Fourth and was quite appropriate for the opening of the observance of our great national holiday. In view of the fact that most Bellefonte people would go to Hecla park and other places in the county, Friday evening was a very opportune time for the parade. The parade began to form at 7 30 and was headed by Company B. with a detatchment of the Fifth regiment bugle corps which marched from the armory to Allegheny street, near Howard street, where they were joined by the Logan Fire company and the Coleville Concert band. This section of the parade then marched to the Undine hose house where they were joined by the Undine Fire company and a number of automobiles of the town. The line of march was out Allegheny street and back on Spring street, then down High street to the bridge. The column then countermarched to Spring and then out South Spring and up Bishop street to the Undine hose house where the parade disbanded. There was a full turnout of both hose companies, and being the weekly drill night of Company B. they were out in full force. The automobile division of the parade was quite an attraction. The line of march was illuminated with colored fire and the and the people of the town were out in large numbers to witness the fire laddies, Company B. the band and the automobiles in line.

Dimeling—Wharton.

Miss Edith Morrow Dimeling, youngest sister of Hon. George M. and John Dimeling, of Clearfield, was married in New York Thursday afternoon of last week to William Park Wharton, of that city. The ceremony was performed in the Church of the Transfiguration by the Rev. George Clark Houghton, the rector. It will be remembered that Mr. Wharton was at one time a member of the faculty at the Academy and an instructor in langagues.

JOHN W. KERN IS NAMED

Indiana Man Will Be Bryan's Running Mate

UNANIMOUS CHOICE

Names of Other Candidates Were Withdrawn and Some Refused to Allow Their Names to go Before Convention.

DELEGATES RETURN TO THEIR HOME

Denver, Col., July 10.—The Democratic National Convention concluded its labor late this afternoon by the nomination of John Worth Kern, of Indiana, for Vice-President, completing the ticket, on which William Jennings Bryan was made the nominee for President during the early hours of the morning.

The nomination of Kern was made by acclamation, amid the resounding cheers of delegates and spectators. No ballot was necessary, as the tide of sentiment had set irresistibly toward the Indiana candidate, State after State registering their delegations in his favor and all other candidates withdrawing before the universal demand for his nomination.

The Convention, after adjourning at daylight with the nomination of Mr. Bryan, resumed its session at 1 p. m. with a powerful undercurrent already in motion toward the nomination of Kern for second place. On the call of States, Indiana presented the name of Kern; Colorado, through former Governor Thomas, placed in nomination Charles A. Towne, of New York; Connecticut presented Archibald McNeill, and Georgia Clark Howell.

The withdrawal of the Connecticut candidate was accompanied by a motion that the nomination of Kern be made by acclamation. The motion was carried with a deafening shout and the great assemblage broke into clamorous demonstration on the accomplishment of its work, and the completion of the Democratic national ticket.

The nomination was made at 4.23 o'clock, and the convention thereupon adjourned without delay.

The Democratic National Committee will assemble tomorrow to complete its new organization and to select the chairman, who will be the commander-in-chief of the Democratic forces in the campaign.

The throngs of delegates and spectators are scattering tonight for their homes, and every train is bearing away thousands from the eventful scenes of the Denver convention.

New Landlord for Garman House.

Al. Garman, the ever obliging landlord at the Garman house has decided to retire from the hotel business and accordingly a deal has been closed whereby a new proprietor will assume charge. The new landlord will be Richard Sheehe of Clearfield, who was appointed receiver for the Dimeling hotel in that place and who conducted it for some time. Mr. Sheehe has purchased the entire furnishings and good will from Mr. Garman and will assume charge in a few days, or just as soon as the license is transferred. He has a five years lease on the building.

Since taking charge of the Garman house a few months ago Mr. Garman has made such improvements on the inside that many of the old patrons hardly recognized the place. Not a room or hall from cellar to attic escaped an overhauling. The dining room was repainted and papered and entirely refurnished with silver ware and linen. The kitchen was enlarged and a laundry added. Every hall and bed room in the house was painted and papered and the parlor has been refitted with handsome rugs and furniture. Mr. Garman has taken great pride in conducting the hotel and looked after everything personally. In all the 35 bed rooms in the house no two beds were made up alike on the same day, a feature which required a great deal of time and attention. The office of the hotel is one of the most finely finished in town, the walls being covered with handsome heavy imported paper.

When Mr. Sheehe takes charge of the hotel next week he will find himself in one of the most neatly furnished and up-to-date hotels in this section of the state.

CATASTROPHE AVERTED.

Coolness of a Patton Man Prevented Much Blood Shed

Albert E. Rumberger, the Standard Oil magnate, who is also one of the Democratic nominees for county auditor, had an experience with a mob of Italians Tuesday that has dyed his scanty erstwhile chestnut-colored hirsute adornment to a premature gray.

The swarthy-hued sons of toil in question were armed with stilettos, tomahawks, scimiters, knives, gatling guns and pistols and but for Mr. Rumberger's indomitable bravery, coolness and presence of mind a sanguinary battle would have been fought that would have backed Waterloo, Gettysburg, Austerlitz and Alsace and Lorain to the last page of "The Great Battles of the World."

Mr. Rumberger attends Sunday school in Patton, but has an office in Spangler, and it was within the classic shades of that provincial burg that the imbroglio occurred. For some reason he had incurred the enmity of one of the foreigners, and the Italian spied him sitting calmly in his office reading Roosevelt's eulogy of John D. Rockefeller.

Stealthily the infuriated Italian approached, until within about a quarter of an inch of his intended and unsuspecting victim he let out a yell that would have put a Comanche Indian to shame and charged upon the enemy, scimiter in hand.

But the lion-hearted Rumberger was schooled in Dago military tactics and met the charge bravely and expeditiously. With a drop kick, which he had used with success in his Association foot ball days, he hurled the deadly weapon from the hand of his antagonist, and exercising his marvelous strength threw him into a convenient stream of water, about a hundred yards distant.

The Guinea soon waded out, however and quickly rallying a force on about 150 of his compatriots renewed the charge. Mr. Rumberger stood his ground, "prepared to do or die," but the oncoming horde, seeing the look of defiance and determination in his cold, gray, steel-like eyes, turned and fled, while their howls and pleas for mercy and forgiveness are till echoeing, re-echoeing and reverberating over the hill tops far away.

At least this is the way "Rummy" tells the story. The readers can draw their own conclusion.

[The above was taken from a Patton paper. Albert is a brother of J. C. Rumberger and you all know what a slugger he is—ED.]

The Ribbon Was a Snake.

Mrs. John P. Haag, of Williamsport, had a bad fright at Nippono park a day or two ago. The Haags are occupying their cosy cabin at the upper end of the park. On entering one of the first-floor rooms of the cottage, during an absence of several hours Mrs. Haag's attention was attracted by an object on the floor which she thought was a piece of black ribbon. She stooped to pick it up, when the black streak began to wriggle. The thing proved to be a blacksnake. Mrs. Haag gave an alarm, and the snake was dispatched. It measured 52 inches in length. The reptile evidently had crawled into the house during the family's absence.

Good Roads and Prosperity.

The roads of France are now practically all built, and they are substantial monuments to Napoleonic foresight and shrewdness. The work of the engineers in the department of public works in France today is not to build new roads, except in rare instances, but to keep those already constructed in a state of high efficiency. There have been no important new roads opened in France for a dozen of years, and the country is so traversed with excellent roadways that no more lines of communication are likely to be exploited save in the case of military necessity. The wagon roads of France, always passable and reaching all centers of population, no matter how small, are the chief competitors of the railways, as means of communication by water are not numerous.

The road system of France has been of far greater value to the country as a means of raising the value of lands and of putting the small peasant proprietors in easy communication with their markets than have the railways. It is the opinion of well-informed Frenchmen who have made a practical study of economic problems that the superb roads of France have been one of the most steady and potent contributions to the material development and marvelous financial elasticity of the country. The far reaching and splendidly maintained road system has distinctly favored the success of the small landed proprietors, and in their prosperity and the ensuing distribution of wealth lies the key to the secret of the wonderful financial vitality and solid prosperity of the French nation.

Our national wealth for 1907 was placed at $116,000,000,000, while that of France was placed at $42.000,000,000; yet we have improved only 150.000 miles of our public roads, while France has improved 340,554 miles.

Is this condition of our public roads an enviable reputation for this great country? After laying claim to superiority over all other nations along almost all other lines of development should we be content to drop to the bottom of the list in road improvement? Can we, at the peril of our commercial interests, afford it? Can we, at the sacrifice of the general well-being and comfort of the great body of our rural population, tolerate it?

Mail Pouch Robbed.

A mail pouch containing several hundred letters and a large number of checks was robbed at the Philadelphia & Reading depot at Halls Station, ten miles east of Williamsport on June 12.

The postal authorities had not missed it until it was found lying along the tracks near the station. It had been cut open and part of its contents removed.

For several weeks a number of Hughesville business men have been asking the postal authrities why certain letters containing checks had not reached their destination. The pouch was evidently taken from a truck waiting for transfer from the Williamsport & North Branch to the Reading.

The Short Cut.

By MARTHA COBB SANFORD.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

When Marjorie opened her sewing room window to let in the brisk morning breeze the picture she made in her white dress, framed by the climbing vines, was refreshing enough to make any passer by look up a second time. One did, though Marjorie was quite unaware of the fact.

Her thoughts were as far away as the shadowy mountains beyond which she had lived her old and happier life. For several years now Marjorie's world had been on this side of the hills, so she sighed, sat down by the open window and began sewing interminable yards of lace on strips of fine muslin. The stitches were microscopic, as befitted the trousseau of a "daughter of the rich."

Half an hour later a whistle as spontaneous as a bird's trill made her jump up and again look out of the window.

In the young man swinging down the road Marjorie recognized one of the summer guests. He opened the gate and came down the path toward her window.

In her haste to escape being caught in the very act of provincial curiosity Marjorie dropped her thimble. It struck a stone on the edge of the walk and, with a metallic ring, bounded off into the garden. The young man rescued it most gallantly.

"It isn't every day a young man finds

"DON'T YOU LOVE ME? DON'T YOU WANT TO BE MY WIFE?"

thimbles growing in a garden," he said, significantly dropping the silver trifle into her hand.

Now, Marjorie understood perfectly well his reference to Peter Pan's calling kisses thimbles, but she feigned ignorance. Diverting as such audacity might be, she must not encourage it, wherefore she said "Thank you" with austere courtesy.

"You are Miss Marjorie Phillips, are you not?" asked the unperturbed young man. "I started out very early this morning to find you."

Marjorie glanced at the thimble, which unconsciously she had slipped on its proper finger.

"There's no denying the evidence," she said, with a pensive little smile which crept straight into the young man's heart.

"I have a message for you, Miss Phillips, from my cousin, or, rather," he corrected, smiling up at her, "a request to make. Julia—Miss Robbins—has a friend visiting her and wants to know at what time she may bring her down this afternoon to see the things you are making. There; I think I got that right. Does it sound rational?"

"Quite intelligent," laughed Marjorie. "Please tell Miss Robbins that the exhibit will be ready any time after 2, which means"—

"Oh, I know," broke in the loquacious message bearer. "It means that I mustn't bother you any longer." Then he added mischievously: "I came by here an hour ago on my way to the postoffice, but was too scared to come in. It was lucky you dropped the thimble just when you"—

But at the word "thimble" Marjorie took flight.

"Well," called Julia Robbins as Overton reached the steps of the luxuriously appointed porch, "did you deliver my message to the village sewing girl?"

Before replying Overton lit a cigarette with exasperating deliberation.

"Yes," he answered at length. "I gave your message to Miss Phillips, and she says you and Miss Morton may come any time after 2."

"Upon my word!" exclaimed the astonished Julia. "'We may come,' and 'Miss Phillips,' indeed!"

"Look here, Julia Robbins," returned Overton feelingly, "I think it's an outrage for a little flower of a girl like that to be sewing her eyes out for another girl who happens to have money and can"—

"Stop right there," commanded Julia. "Catherine here will think you're a hot headed Socialist. Would you have me sewing my own eyes out perchance, dear cousin?"

"Well, perhaps I am a bit hasty, Julia," admitted Overton good naturedly. "Forgive me and tell me what you know about this little Miss Phillips."

"Nothing romantic, Garret, I assure you. Her family used to come here summers, I believe. And after her father died a bankrupt the girl took in sewing for the summer folks. Does that fire your young imagination?"

"And she supports herself and her mother?" inquired Garret, with cutting directness.

"Why, I suppose so," answered Julia languidly.

Whereupon, with a careless "Well, goodby; I'm off for a day's fishing," Overton sauntered away with little comprehension of the feminine consternation he was leaving behind him.

Julia was the first to recover.

"Don't you care, Catherine," she said defiantly. "We'll nip that little romance in the bud."

Several days later, upon catching sight of Marjorie at the window, Overton swung open the little cottage gate and called out cheerily, "Lost any more thimbles, Miss Phillips?"

Marjorie, her color mounting high, pretended not to hear and continued sewing with nervous haste.

"You have another message from Miss Robbins?" she asked politely.

"Not on your life!" was the unexpected reply. "I came on my own account this time, Miss Phillips. I want to ask you some questions."

"I'm very busy, Mr. Overton."

Garret noted the knowledge of his name. He remembered that he had not mentioned it at their first interview. So she had been making inquiries about him! She was more interested than she appeared.

"Do all girls think these frippery things a—a necessary matrimonial asset?" he asked, indicating with a nod the piles of snowy thin stuff on the chairs about her.

"Your cousin and Miss Morton are not exceptions, I think."

As she mentioned the girl's name Marjorie watched Overton's face closely, but there was no betrayal of any personal interest.

"Do you make a specialty of trousseaux?" was his next question.

"It looks as though I should have to," Marjorie answered. "As soon as I have finished your cousin's there will be one to make for Miss Morton, I understand."

"Really!" was Overton's surprised exclamation. Who's the man, may I ask? You have evidently been taken into confidence."

"I've evidently been taken in," was Marjorie's scarcely audible reply as, with flushed cheeks, she gathered up her sewing and left the window.

"Well, by Jupiter!" exclaimed Overton as the truth of the situation dawned upon him. "So that's the game!"

Every morning thereafter, rain or shine, Overton bade Marjorie "Good morrow" at her window, for he had discovered that through her garden lay a short cut to the village postoffice. Marjorie, on her part, failed to hang out a "No Trespassing" sign, though common sense told her that she ought to do so.

But one sunny morning Overton, impatient, threw discretion and conventions to the wind.

"Little Miss Marjorie," he said pleadingly, "do you suppose I could persuade you to make a trousseau for—for my wife to be?"

The color flashed rebelliously into Marjorie's cheeks, and tears gathered in her eyes. One daring little drop slipped over her lashes and fell upon Garret's hand.

"Why, what is this, dearest? You're not crying? Don't you love me? Don't you want to be my wife? I thought"—

For answer the tired girl dropped her head on his hands, which still held hers, and sobbed softly.

But Overton understood.

"Marjorie," he said lovingly, "look up at me, little one."

Very shyly Marjorie lifted her pretty, tumbled head, then drew away from the window with frightened haste.

"They are watching us," she whispered from behind the curtains, "your cousin and her friend."

"I'm glad of it," Garret replied, with a laugh. "Do you think if I should come back tonight, sweetheart, that we could find any—thimbles—in the garden?"

"It will be pretty dark," she answered softly, "but—I'll help you."

Origin of the Cravat.

While every man wears a cravat, there is probably not one in a thousand who could in an offhand way tell you how it came about that men first placed such an ornament about their collars. The word cravat came into our language about 1636. Prior to that year a feature of the uniform of the Austrian cavalry was a wide band of coarse linen worn in folds around the neck under their short hussar jackets. This cavalry organization was called the Cravatte, its members being styled the Cravattes. Later in the seventeenth century France recruited a regiment of cavalry, adopting for it the uniform of the Austrian regiment recruited in Croatia, calling it the Royal Cravattes. Later in England the word cravat was applied to a neckerchief. After the battle of Steenkerke, in Flanders, in 1692, an English officer brought home the steamkirk, a long flowing neckscarf. The neckwear today is clearly traceable to the steamkirk and the modification it underwent.—Sartorial Art Journal.

A Proper Pride.

Farmer Green—D'ye remember thet ornary little Pimpernell boy thet helped me with th' haryin' last year? I give him $18 a month an' found. Well, he's got to be a right smart ball pitcher, an' t'other day a feller came along an' offered him $3,000 to finish out th' season with a perfeshnal club.

The City Boarder—Well, well! He jumped at it, of course?

Farmer Green—Not yet. Sandy Pimpernell may be a freckle faced runt, but he's got a proper pride about him too. He says thet he don't know as he cares to be tied up to any team thet looks like it might be a tail ender.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Penance For Discourtesy.

Nicholas I., czar of Russia, was the type of an absolute aristocrat. The succession of terrible wars which clouded his reign did not tend to soften his disposition or to render him less imperious. But, rough and harsh as he was, Nicholas had a measure of chivalry in his disposition. He would not tolerate under any circumstances an insult offered to a woman. As the czar was driving through the streets of St. Petersburg he caught sight of an officer of his household in the act of upsetting an old beggar woman whose hands were raised in a prayer for alms. The official was quite unmindful of the august witness of his act and was rather pleased when, a few hours later, he was summoned to the imperial presence. Nicholas soon undeceived him and in the presence of a dozen courtiers cut him to the quick with his indignant reproof.

"Enough!" said Nicholas finally. "You will walk up and down that corridor all night, and every time you turn you will say in a loud voice: 'I am a puppy! I am a puppy.'"

Carried Out Instructions.

Every sailor has his story of the mistakes which landlubbers make over the names of things at sea, which always seem to be exactly the opposite of what they are on land.

A new boy had gone on board a West India ship, upon which a painter had also been employed to paint the ship's side. The painter was at work upon a staging suspended under the ship's stern.

The captain, who had just got into a boat alongside, called out to the new boy, who stood leaning over the rail, "Let go the painter!"

Everybody should know that a boat's painter is the rope which makes it fast, but this boy did not know it. He ran aft and let go the ropes by which the painter's staging was held. Meantime the captain was wearied with waiting to be cast off.

"You rascal!" he called. "Why don't you let go the painter?"

"He's gone, sir," said the boy briskly. "He's gone—pots, brushes and all!"—London Standard.

She Wanted to Know.

A little woman with wilton carpet floral designs on her hat came into the uptown Pennsylvania ticket office the other day and bought a ticket for a point down the state.

She gathered up her ticket and asked for a little folder because it had a picture on it in colors of a girl waving goodby to somebody from the end of a train. Then she placed her ticket inside her purse and the purse inside a little satchel and put the satchel inside her shopping bag, which she carried in a small alligator traveling bag. Just before she started out she inquired of City Passenger Agent Dillon, who had been waiting on her, "How long before my train starts?"

"You'll just about have time to make it," Dillon told her. "It leaves the Union station in about seventeen minutes."

"Seventeen minutes," she repeated, "and is that by central time or eastern time?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"The Greatest Widower."

This is said to be the title of a genuine essay evolved some years ago by a boy in a Welsh board school:

"King Henry VIII. was the greatest widower that ever lived. He was born at Anno Domini in the year 1066. He had 510 wives besides children. The first was beheaded and executed. The second was revoked. She never smiled again. But she said the word 'Calais' would be found on her heart after her death. The greatest man in this reign was Lord Sir Garret Wolsey. He was sir named the Boy Bachelor. He was born at the age of 15, unmarried. Henry VIII. was succeeded on the throne by his great-grandmother, the beautiful and accomplished Mary, queen of Scots, sometimes known as the Lady of the Lake!"

Helping the Burglar Out.

"John," she whispered, "there's a burglar in the drawing room. He has just knocked against the piano and hit several keys at once."

"I'll go down," said he.

"Oh, John, don't do anything rash!"

"Rash! Why, I'm going to help him. You don't suppose he can remove the piano from the house without assistance!"—London Throne.

An Omission.

Magistrate—What is the charge against you this time? Boggs—They cotched me a-stealing oranges, yer worship. Magistrate—Didn't I tell you when you were here before not to steal anything more? Boggs—No, yer worship; you said not to steal any more lemons, but yer didn't say a word about oranges.—London Graphic.

Making It Simple.

In the course of his sermon a preacher in a rural district used the world phenomenon. This word caused one of the members some trouble, for he was unable to attach any meaning to it. Finally he determined to seek an explanation from the minister and at the close of the service approached him on the subject.

"What did yer mean by that there long word yer used in yer sermon?" he began.

"Oh, I see you do not know what a phenomenon is," replied the minister. "Well, have you ever seen a cow grazing in a field in which thistles were growing?"

"Yes; many a time."

"That is not a phenomenon. And no doubt you have often listened to a lark singing merrily away up in the clouds."

"Yes."

"That, again, is not a phenomenon. But if you saw that cow sitting on a thistle singing like a lark that would be a phenomenon."—Liverpool Mercury.

Kadiak Island's Queer Climate.

Of the abnormal climate of Kadiak island, Alaska, a writer says: "In spite of its situation in such high latitudes we find here what may well be described as 'the parting of the ways' between the arctic and more temperate regions. For, thanks to the moderating influence of the Japanese current which flows along its southern coasts, Kadiak is favored with climatic conditions such as are unknown even in places a few miles north or east of it on the mainland of Alaska. So pronounced is the demarcation line that even on the island itself a traveler in summer will suddenly emerge from amid forests and vegetation of almost tropical luxuriance into a barren, desolate land of silence, where lofty snow capped mountains tower aloft, brooding, as it were, over the past terrors of an arctic winter, which will soon descend once more, enveloping them in its icy grip."

The English Channel.

One of the most famous bits of water in the world is the English channel which separates and yet unites the sister countries of England and France and has been the scene of so much of their history. It extends on the English side from Land's End to Dover and on the French side from the island of Ushant to Calais. Its entrance from the German ocean is the strait of Dover, twenty-one miles wide, while at the other extremity, where it joins the Atlantic, it is 100 miles from shore to shore. The greatest width midway is 150 miles. Owing to the strong current setting in from the westward, the high winds which frequently prevail and the configuration of the shores it has a roughness which has become proverbial and few cross it without seasickness.

It Would Flatter Man.

Few men have deserved and few have won higher praise in an epitapt than the following, which was written by Lord Byron on the tomb of his dead Newfoundland:

"Near this spot are deposited the remains of one who possessed beauty without vanity, strength without insolence, courage without ferocity and all the virtues of man without his vices. This praise, which would be unmeaning flattery if inscribed over human ashes, is but a just tribute to the memory of Boatswain, a dog, who was born at Newfoundland May 3, 1803, and died at Newstead abbey Nov. 18, 1808."

EDITORIAL.

PITTSBURGERS claim to have won the spelling match at Cleveland, yet they are uncertain as to the way to spell the name of their own city.

DOWN in Wellville, a little village in York county, a good woman as a memorial to her son has presented the town with a fine library building filled with books. She believes in erecting a monument that will outlive granite or bronze.

COMMANDER Peary has started on his third dash for the north pole and William Jennings Bryan has started on his third dash for the White House. Commander Peary firmly believes that his chances for success are ever so much better than Mr. Bryan's.

MR. BRYAN hastens to say that if elected this year he will never be a candidate for a second term. This is tempting bait, but the chances are the voters will make sure in their own way that he shall never be a candidate for a second term, even at the risk of having him continue as a candidate for a first term.

LITERARY COMPANIONS.

A news dispatch of recent date gave the information that a publishing firm which undertook to market great quantities of books which were not new, but which were of standard literary merit, has sold more than a million volumes in less than two years! If this assertion is true it is encouraging. The romances of Scott, the tales of Dickens the masterly depictions of Thackeray, the consummate verbal skill of Robert Louis Stevenson, the weird power of Poe, the wonderful genius of Hawthorne—these are only a few of the works and the attributes of writers with which every normal person should have at least a partial acquaintance. The fact that these authors are dead is a matter of no consequence. Their highest work is not dead, but very much alive; and it promises to endure long after the names of the writers of the "best sellers" of this generation have been forgotten. There is abundant amusement and no little instruction to be gained by keeping such excellent literary company!

MY CONCEPTION OF THE PRESIDENCY.

BY WILLIAM H. TAFT.

The following interesting statement by William H. Taft, of Ohio, Republican nominee for President of the United States, was written for "Collier's Weekly" and appeared in that publication in its issue of June 27th.

In the four years that I have been a member of the Cabinet I have become familiar enough with the responsibilities and burdens of the Presidency to know that no man can afford unduly to seek that great office. If he is attracted by honor and power alone, without the hope of being useful, he is unworthy of the honor and unfit for the use of the power. He must prefer for the sake of his own peace of mind never to be President to being a poor President. Confident that the platform on which he stands is for the best interests of the nation, he is untrue to himself and his supporters if he does not fight valiantly for election after he accepts the leadership. But, of course, he must draw the line at any compact which will not leave him free of promises and of the control of any faction.

The President's duties, clearly outlined by the Constitution, have grown broader in the interpretation with the growth of the country. He should be in the prime of years, health, and vigor. The capacity for hard work is a better equipment than genius in mastering the essentials of all departments of the Government and undergoing the strain of countless interviews. He should look not only to those in office but to those out of office in all branches of private activity for information and opinion, in order that he may arrive at the truth when he is surrounded by the conflict of interests which come to him with the fair words of the special pleader.

In many senses, though the most sought after, he is the loneliest man in the United States. Elected directly by the people, their representative head, from them, in the sober thought of the majority, he will get his best counsel. They, as a whole, view public affairs unselfishly. Though indifference or preoccupation with private affairs may keep them attending primaries or scanning closely either candidate or measures, they can centre on the President as their instrument the expression of their wishes. He should be always near the people in thought and as near them in person as his position will permit. In common with the people, he is human and he must ask their charity for his mistakes. When they have ceased to believe in his sincerity and uprightness of purpose, his is a cheerless task. Once convinced that he has divined and is carrying out their real wish, neither elated by any ephemeral outburst of applause nor diverted by any outburst of censure, he must proceed unwaveringly, always by lawful methods, to the accomplishment of the popular will

From Washington he may learn nobility, fortitude, and forthrightness. Lincoln's life and speeches must be his source of inspiration when he is misunderstood and he has to say to himself, "Patience and cheer." It is easier since we had Lincoln than it was before to be a good President. He set a standard

It remained for Roosevelt to prove how the people will respond to a strong and true leadership when the hour has come for great reforms. The policies which he inaugurated must be continued and developed. They are right and they are the policies of the people. For that reason his successor may well disregard any charge of lack of originality if he does not make an entirely new program of his own.

A president at this time has work before him clearly defined The enforcement of the law equally against high and low, the powerful and the weak, should be his first thought. The danger to our country from laxity or favoritism in this is the greatest one we have to face. The conservation of our national resources and their development for the use of all along the lines of equal opportunity, too, must command his immediate attention. It should be his aim to give high tone to his administration as Mr. Roosevelt has by surrounding himself with men of earnest, enthusiastic interest in the public weal and of the cleanest but most effective methods.

IT is unprofitable to be a loafer—unprofitable to yourself and unprofitable to the community. The man who has not produced a little more than has been required for him to live—who has not made a little more effort than is required for his own existence—has not helped to advance the world a single clog; while the loafer who produces less than he consumes who consumes the efforts of others in order to maintain his own existance—is a dead weight on society and adds to the burden of those who are striving to further the advaneement of the world and of mankind.

WHEN James S. Sherman was nominated by the Republicans for vice president much was said about taking up a man practically unknown to the people. The Democrats have nominated John W. Kern of Indiana, who has no public record by which he may be judged and is practically unknown to the voters of the country. In this respect he ranks below Congressman Sherman, who had a congressional career of some prominence. Mr. Kern's record shows that he was a member of the Indiana bar, supreme court reporter, city attorney, while his most conspicuous performance in public life was to suffer defeat as the Democratic candidate for governor of Indiana in 1900. In that respect he is a fit running mate for Mr. Bryan.

THE SAME OLD BRYAN.

William Jennings Bryan is the embodiment of political unrest. His career has been from the beginning a continuous appeal to the thoughtless, and he has at last determined to throw off the mask.

As the Buffalo News observes, it's a great day just now for the radical. Mr. Bryan calmly admits that he has lost the sympathy and support of the business men of the United States, but says that he is glad of it. He does not want any such backing. He is going to the plain people, he says, and he seems to mean those who are ready for any desperate game in politics that may alarm the industrious, the saving, the well-to-do, the thrifty mechanic or tradesman, the employer of labor and the wage-earner who keeps his head as well as he does his work.

The Olive Branch Chapel.

It might have been appropriately named the Providential Chapel.

A special providence attending it has been manifestly seen from the first start of the undertaking. Nothing of the kind was thought of by any one previous to the day when the incipient step was taken.

The Mountain Side Bible School founded by advisory directions received from Presiding Elder J. Ellis Bell, was opened on Sunday February 10th 1906 with eighty one members. Increasing in numbers the school soon found, on special occasions, the seating capacity of the little Methodist church too small for the attendance.

It so happened that the second anniversary of the Bible school fell on Palm Sunday, April 12th 1908.

Appropriate exercises had been diligently prepared for this occasion. "A cloud of witnesses" present on that sacred Sabbath day, can testify that more than fifty persons outside could not find even standing room in that little church Providence made it clearly manifest that the time had now come for the people of Coleville to follow a Divine direction. "Let us rise up and build. So they strengthened their hands for this good work. Then answered I them and said unto them, the God of heaven, he will prosper us, therefore, we his servants will arise and build." Neh. 2: 18,20.

The same Providence then began at once to furnish the means needful for our answer to the Divine call.

The American Lime and Stone Company donated a desirable lot together with all the stone and lime that might be needed. Every man, woman and child in Coleville, favoring the Olive Branch Bible School are coming forward with free-will offerings of work and money for investment in the newly constructed building.

The Olive Branch Chapel, "beautiful for situation," will be an ornament to the village, a place of resort for all alike without partiality to share the gracious privileges to be enjoyed there.

Additional Locals.

—While fishing just below the falls of the dam Tuesday afternoon T. Clayton Brown caught another large trout which measured 18½ inches in length.

—Adam Shroyer of Curtin is seriously ill at his home with typhoid fever. William Reeder was also taken sick in Bellefonte on Saturday and is threatened with the same disease

—Last Friday night dogs killed fifteen sheep on the farm of Alex. Masden, near Beech Creek, and injured a number of others, practically destroying the entire flock. There were five or six dogs whose owners are not known, Mr Masden will receive some indemnity from the county but not enough to cover the actual loss.

—This is the season of the year when vacations and camping parties are in order and already a number of Bellefonte people have enjoyed these summer pleasures and others are planning to take an outing soon. Camping along the nearby mountain streams has become quite common with those who are wont to get away from their busy cares for awhile.

—So many "town lot oil wells" are being drilled in Oil City that they are being regarded as a menace. Three wells have just been drilled within 150 feet of the business blocks and property owners in close proximity are protesting. To make the wells productive they are treated to a liberal dose of nitroglycerin and the "shooter" is fined $25 each time, but this has not stopped operations.

—At a regular meeting of the Soldiers Orphan commission, upon the recommendation of the property committee, Miss Margaret Brisbin was unanimously elected as a teacher in the Soldiers Orphan Industrial School at Scotland, Pa., Miss Brisbin is a niece of Col. J. L. Spangler of this place and this is quite an honored promotion. She formerly was a teacher in the Chester Springs Orphan School.

—This is the season of the year when the great farm pest the Canada thistle should be looked after. The plant is in bloom in July and if cut down during this month the seed will not have a chance to ripen and be carried far and wide and thus cause more labor and annoyance. There is moreover, a law which requires land owners to cut the leshtist in July. If neglected it is the duty of the constables to go and cut the weeds and collect the damages from the property owners.

—Benjamin Smith was shot by his son in mistake for a burglar at Stony Gap, Lycoming county, early Sunday morning. On account of the heat the elder Smith rose and went into the yard to sleep. His son Stephen, returning home at 1 a. m., found the door standing open, took his rifle and began searching for the supposed burglars. Just then he spied his father in the yard and fired. The ball plowed through his hip, but the father will probably recover.

—The purchase of the Schoen Steel Car Wheel works for three million dollars of the United States Steel corporation is the best of evidence that the business outlook is good As suggested by the Pittsburg Gazette, such a purchase would not have been made at this time if the financial and industrial conditions were not such as to justify the big investment. The president of the big steel corporation is out in an interview in which he says business is steadily improving and there is every reason to regard the future with confidence.

—Raspberries are unusually plenty about Bellefonte this year and for the past week the berry pickers have been out in large numbers on the hills and in the hollows about town and come home with their buckets filled with the luscious fruit Many of the boys and girls find berry picking profitable as they can readily dispose of them at from eight to ten cents a quart. Huckleberries do not abound in large quantities as near town as the raspberries but the pickers are bringing them in also and find a ready sale for them. There is every promise of a good crop of blackberries.

—A wealthy merchant of Altoona has been swindled by a stranger who negotiated for the sale of a device to make bank notes of all denominations by putting blank paper in one end of the machine and turning a crank to get money at the other end. The man is said to have paid $100 on the $1500 machine and was to have the outfit the next day. The stranger left the town but is reported to have received installment payments on several other "machines" from unsuspecting victims before his departure. The police are now trying to locate him

—Two games of more than usual interest are being played this afternoon in the Centre and Clinton league. The Woolrich team will play a postponed game with Mill Hall. These teams are tie at the bottom of the list and each is expecting to rise from that undesirable position in today's game and the contest promises to be a lively one. The Orvis Mountaineers will battle with the Red Roses at Beech Creek, and while the Orvis team has such a lead that their defeat by the Red Roses would not take them from the lead they are making every effort for a better lead while the Red Roses are determined that the percentage at the top must be lowered.

Scarcity of Labor Reported.

When the whistle blew at the Carnegie mills in Pittsburg Monday morning fifty thousand men answered for work. Not only the Carnegie but many others resumed full time. In the mining and coke districts several thousand men returned to labor. A remarkable condition exists in these districts. There is actually a shortage of workmen, and operations are being by inability to obtain sufficient men. Hundreds of foreigners went home last winter and failed to return, and this has resulted in a great shortage of unskilled labor.

That the railroads are feeling the resumption of business is evidenced by the fact that all the lines that make Pittsburg their headquarters have ordered their repair shops on double time. The sudden return of prosperity has caught many of the roads short of cars, and a big demand is expected for them when the crops start to move this fall.

Honest Officials.

Commenting on a bit of news from Harrisburg recently which differed from the usual summing up of similar affairs, the Washington Observer says: "We had startling information from Harrisburg the other day that about $18 00 of the $100,000 appropriated for the Jamestown exposition had been returned to the state treasury. This is something new in Pennsylvania. It shows however, that the affairs of this commonwealth in the hands of a governor like Stuart an auditor general like Young and some others who are honest and faithful to their duties are safe. Honest efficient government always pays from a financial standpoint as well as from a moral one. And it always pays to insist on a strict accounting of public moneys and vigorous protests on the part of the press and good citizens upon political conditions which foster corruption dishonesty and incompetency.

Found Petrified Remains

At the Ellangowan coal strippings, Shenandoah, a petrified leg of a man has been found by Patrick Donahue. The limb is perfectly formed, although it is larger than the ordinary size. It is of stone, and very heavy, requiring three men to carry it.

Near the spot where the find was made several silurian brachiopods and numerous specimens of the carboniferous age have been unearthed.

The miners are daily expecting to find the rest of the petrified body, but Mine Forman S. J. Brown says that there will be no further discoveries, as a sudden break occurs in the strata at that place.

Recently a petrified hen was found which resembles an ordinary hen in every particular.

K. L. C. E. Convention.

Wm. Solt of Howard, president of the Centre County Keystone League Christian Endeavor was in Bellefonte Monday, having returned from Buffalo Run where he met with the committee to complete arrangements for the next county convention. The date for this annual meeting has been set for September 9th and 10th. Arrangements are being made to have several prominent speakers address the convention and the members of the several societies in the district will have an important part on the program.

MRS. FRANK STROEBE

I was a nervous wreck.
I felt no desire to live.

REMARKABLE RECOVERY, THANKS TO PE-RU-NA.

Mrs. Frank Stroebe, R. F. D. 1, Appleton, Wis., writes:

"I began using Peruna a few months ago when my health and strength were all gone, and I was nothing but a nervous wreck, could not sleep, eat or rest properly, and felt no desire to live.

"Three bottles of Peruna made me look at life in a different light, as I began to regain my lost strength. While my recovery took nearly four months, at the end of that time I was better than I ever had been before. I had a splendid color and never weighed more in my life.

"I certainly think Peruna is without a rival as a tonic and strength builder, and it has my endorsement."

This lady entirely recovered from a nervous breakdown. She did not go away to a sanitarium, and spend hundreds of dollars for a cure. She just staid at home, took Peruna, and in four months weighed more than ever in her life, had a splendid color, life looked bright to her. Peruna did all this for her. What more could be expected of any remedy?

Howe's Great London Shows

The performance is exceptionally fine and full of interest to all lovers of the ring. Nearly everything is entirely new, and what is not is managed and brought out under such new methods and system that every act is refreshing and pleasing. Howe's Shows seem not willing to simply pursue a business on antique methods, but to advance the show business to more genteel and refined lines. All vulgarities and ancient impoliteness, in and out of the ring, have been eliminated, and the show will meet with unbounded favor wherever it goes this year. We say this in all sincerity. Great improvements are noticeable, especially to us old fellows who have attended every circus for more than fifty years that has come along. No gentleman or lady, no matter how moral or how religious the calling they pursue, nor what refined circle they move in, need hesitate to attend the show, nor be certain of anything but refined pleasure, free from anything that disgusts or casts a shadow of contempt This is as it should be, and we predict a greater future for the Howe's Shows on these lines than has ever been enjoyed by any competor.

The new menagerie is a vast collection of the earth's most interesting and marvelous wonders.

New cages, rolling stock equipment, all bright in gold and silver, will be seen for for the first time after a full winter's embellishment by scores of expert artisans.

The show date here is Friday, July 17.

Methodist Day Plans.

Methodist Day at Lakemont park, Altoona an event which in past years has attracted as many as 20,000 people to that popular resort, will be celebrated this year on Thursday, July 30th, and indications point to one of the most successful outings ever held. The committee on arrangements, District Superintendent B. C. Conner, Rev. H. A. Straub, and Rev. Horace L. Jacobs, has practically completed the program for the day and it will be an interesting one. The speaker for the morning has not been fully decided but in the afternoon Bishop D. H. Moore who recently returned from an official trip to the Orient, and who now resides at Cincinnati, will be the speaker for the afternoon service. Hon. Samuel Dickey, L. L. D., president of Albion college Michigan will deliver a lecture. For the various services of the day the most elaborate musical program ever prepared for such an occasion will be rendered by a full chorus and orchestra in charge of Prof. T. D. Wilson, of Juniata. The meals of the day will be served by the ladies of the Fifth Avenue Methodist church and light refreshments and parcel room will be in charge of the Methodist society of Elyswen.

How They Celebrated.

It might be remarked this year that there were celebrations and celebrations. For many years it has been the case that Hecla park was the scene of the whole celebration in Centre county but this year there were picnics and other ways of dividing the crowd all over the county. This had a tendency to lessen the attendance of the Undine picnic at Hecla. The ball game at Snow Shoe which necessitated the running of a special train drew the crowd from Bald Eeagle valley and the Alpha Fire company celebration and picnic at State College also proved quite an attraction in that section. Both these places were attended by people from Bellefonte. Many persons who had never been to Snow Shoe and had never been over switch backs on the Snow Shoe railroad took advantage of the trip in order to take a ride up the mountain. The early morning rain and threatening clouds kept many people at home during the day.

The fourth this year was not as noisy as it has been in the past several years and there was an absence of the real dangerous fireworks: The revolver and blank cartridge was in use but there were not so many of them as has been the custom. It seems that those who are wont to celebrate are outgrowing that nerve racking noise. So far no serious accidents have come to our knowledge.

Many persons in Bellefonte were noticed going with their families to some quiet and pleasant little nook where they could enjoy the day in peace. Dainty lunches were taken along and real family picnics were enjoyed. This custom is now quite in vogue on the Fourth and will be more so in coming years as the people who observe this holiday are seeking peace and quiet in preference to the noise and din of the crowded places.

Rats Cause Enormous Loss.

A careful investigation convinces the biographical survey of the Government Department of Agriculture that rats cause an annual loss to this country of $56,000,000. The survey accuses these rodents of many kinds of destruction. They cause fires, they ruin clothing, they have voracious appetites and they spread disease. The arraignment is a terrible one and thoroughly convincing on the point that the rat ought to be exterminated.

To exterminate the rat is what the biological survey started out to do, but after months of patient investigation it frankly gives up the task. It has tried inoculation, has painted the rat to study his haunts, has experimented with poison, only to conclude the most effective weapon against this vicious enemy of mankind is the old, honored rat trap. The investigators advise the householder who values his peace of mind and his safety to keep the trap baited at all times. True, the family cat may assist in keeping the rat off the premises, but no cat has yet invented that is an automatic repeater, So the trap's the thing.

Do You Open Your Mouth

Like a young bird and gulp down whatever food or medicine may be offered you? Or, do you want to know something of the composition and character of that which you take into your stomach whether as food or medicine?

Most intelligent and sensible people now-a-days insist on knowing what they employ whether as food or as medicine. Dr. Pierce believes they have a perfect right to insist upon such knowledge. So he publishes, broadcast and on each bottle-wrapper, what his medicines are made of and verifies it under oath. This he feels he can well afford to do because the more the ingredients of which his medicines are made are studied and understood the more will their superior curative virtues be appreciated.

For the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses, irregularities and derangements, giving rise to frequent headaches, backache, dragging-down pain or distress in lower abdominal or pelvic region, accompanied, ofttimes, with a debilitating, pelvic, catarrhal drain and kindred symptoms of weakness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy. It is equally effective in curing painful periods, in giving strength to nursing mothers and in preparing the system of the expectant mother for baby's coming, thus rendering childbirth safe and comparatively painless. The "Favorite Prescription" is a most potent, strengthening tonic to the general system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. It is also a soothing and invigorating nervine and cures nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the distinctly feminine organs.

A host of medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, recommend each of the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is made for the cure of the diseases for which it is claimed to be a cure. You may read what they say for yourself by sending a postal card request for a free booklet of extracts from the leading authorities, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post.

A Valuable Agent

The glycerine employed in Dr. Pierce's medicines greatly enhances the medicinal properties which it extracts and holds in solution much better than alcohol would. It also possesses medicinal properties of its own, being a valuable demulcent, nutritive, antiseptic and antiferment. It adds greatly the efficacy of the Black Cherrybark, Golden Seal root, Stone root and Queen's root, contained in "Golden Medical Discovery" in subduing chronic, or lingering coughs, bronchial, throat and lung affections, for all of which these agents are recommended by standard medical authorities.

In all cases where there is a wasting away of flesh loss of appetite, with weak stomach, as in the early stages of consumption, there be no doubt that glycerine acts as a valuable nutritive and aids the Golden Seal root, Stone root, Queen's root and Black Cherrybark in promoting digestion and building up the flesh and strength, controlling the cough and bringing about a healthy condition of the whole system. Of course, it must not be expected to work miracles. It will not cure consumption except in its earlier stages. It will cure very severe, obstinate, chronic coughs, bronchial and laryngeal troubles, and chronic sore throat with hoarseness. In acute cough it is not so effective, It is in the lingering coughs or those of long standing, even when accompanied by bleeding from lungs, that it has performed its most marvelous cures.

KILLING QUACK GRASS.

Quack grass and bad habits are much akin in that it is a good deal easier to let them get a foothold than it is to weed them out after they get established. For this reason it is quite safe to be somewhat wary of any "easy" plan which may be suggested for stamping out this worst of weed pests. The difficulty lies in the fact that instead of being an animal, having a life period covering a year only, quack grass lives from year to year, due to the fact that it multiplies by root stalk as well as by seed. This fact makes ordinary cultivation which is death to weeds of the type of pigeon grass, crab grass, pigweed and the like worse than useless, for it results in breaking the roots into pieces and spreading them, having the same effect in multiplying the pest as would a deliberate scattering of the seed. In view of this fact, other methods have to be resorted to. The consensus of opinion on the part of those who have had experience with quack grass seems to be that the only effective method is that which results in smothering the plant—that is, not allowing it to develop a leaf system during one whole season. This means such a weakening of vitality of the plant system that it dies for lack of breath and sustenance. This result may be brought about by a thorough preparation of the soil in May and sowing of a dense and rapidly growing crop like millet or buckwheat, which should be plowed under to a good depth when in full blossom and reseeded to the same crop and plowed under again when in full bloom. The land should be given a cultivated crop the next year. Even with the most careful methods some roots of the grass are likely to live through the winter, in which case they should be taken out by hand root and branch. This process of extermination or any other that is effective involves a considerable expenditure of both time and money and means not only the loss of one season's crop, but the work devoted to ridding the field of the pest. The best advice that can be given is to stamp the grass out at the start before it gets a foothold, and this is effectively done by carefully covering small patches of it with tar paper and keeping the grass from getting light and air for a period of two months. It is more than likely that a good many farms get inoculated with quack grass before the owners fully realize what it is. It is well to study it on a neighbor's farm rather than on one's own.

BUY FROM HOME DEALERS.

Not for the purpose of helping the home merchant so much as helping himself should the farmer in purchasing his lumber, paint and other supplies get the prices and ascertain the quality of the materials which are offered for sale by the home dealer. Usually he can buy at home on conditions which enable him to return goods in case they are not satisfactory, while the local merchant is almost always willing to give a customer credit provided he is good. In the case of purchases of foreign goods one not only has to pay cash, but if the goods are not entirely satisfactory he is quite loath to send them back when his money is at the other end of the line. If the concern in the big city has a dissatisfied customer here and there it is not likely a matter of so much concern as it would be in the case of the dealer in the home town, whose customers are relatively limited. As illustrating the point we would make, there came to our notice the other day the case of a patent paint concern which was selling a brand of paint that on analysis was found to contain 20 per cent of plain water, while the other ingredients in it were unworthy the name of pigment. If a home dealer should palm off such truck as this on the people of his vicinity he would in all probability be run out of town and yet there are hundreds of concerns of just this type that do a thriving business because of the confidence of gullible buyers in their glowing advertising announcements.

DEGREES FOR FARMERS.

The agricultural department of the University of Wisconsin has inaugurated a policy which is a most commendable and practical one. It is, in brief, the establishment of a mark of distinction to be conferred upon enterprising and progressive farmers of the state who have distinguished themselves in any particular line of their calling. This is but doing the same thing in the realm of agriculture that is customarily done by most colleges in the conferring of degrees upon those, whether graduates of such institutions or not, who have achieved especial success along lines of study, research or discovery. The plan in question would seem to have the further excellent feature of arousing interest on the part of the farmers of the state in the work of their agricultural school because of its endeavor to recognize the worth of their work of whatever kind.

Castor oil rubbed on the cow's teats at intervals will remove warts that may be on them.

Little pruning should be done in the orchard after July, as scars made do not readily heal over if the work is done later than this.

The patch of sweet corn planted in May or early June will be a pretty good proposition to fall back on while fly time lasts and the pastures are short. As a rule, cows do not recover the milk flow which is lost during this period.

Every flock of confined poultry should have an abundance of green food in the shape of grass cuttings or weeds from the garden and all the skimmilk, sour milk or buttermilk that they will eat. These are substitutes for foods which the hens would get were they running at large.

Other things touching sunshine, moisture and soil fertility being equal, the tomato vine which is pruned and allowed to mature but a limited amount of fruit will produce that of a much larger size. This can be done most effectively by training the vines on a trellis or on individual stakes.

Any old pail, can or paint keg that may be on the place containing water is quite likely to serve as a prolific breeding place for mosquitoes during the rainy season. Empty all such receptacles and place a piece of wire screen over the rain barrel at the corner of the house, and the supply of mosquitoes about the place will be materially decreased.

Careful experiments show that under average outdoor conditions manure will lose 50 per cent of its fertilizing value in a period of five months. It is this loss that furnishes such a strong argument for the purchase of the manure spreader, which not only effects a big saving along the line mentioned, but makes possible the handling of the farm fertilizers at a much less cost in labor.

That there seems to be a delicate and nicely adjusted instinct in even so low an organism as plant life is shown in the fact that the reaching tendril of a climbing vine will most always stretch toward rather than away from the nearest support, while the sprouts on the potatoes that may be in the cellar grow always toward rather than away from the light that streams in at the window.

As a result of careful feeding experiments it has been found that if fed under favorable conditions 100 pounds of buttermilk or skimmilk are worth half a bushel of corn in feeding value, while if fed with corn at the ratio of three parts to one pork can be produced at a less cost than with any other ration. It has been further ascertained that if fed fresh from the separator skimmilk has a maximum feeding value.

Reports which seem almost unbelievable are to the effect that in one section of Oklahoma there fell during one of the May storms twenty inches of water within a period of twenty-four hours. This would seem to have been literally a cloudburst, if the use of the word is ever justifiable. One realizes more fully how great a precipitation this was when he knows that the average annual rainfall for that section of the country is about thirty-five inches.

A large per cent of the poor stick and slipshod farmers to be found in any locality usually rate themselves as too experienced and well posted to learn anything of the experience of others through the avenue of books or farm journals. Much of the advance which has been made along agricultural lines in the past has been the direct result of the experimenting and research of college professors, dubbed by many as lead pencil farmers. However, with the more intelligent and progressive practical farmers of the country there is a disposition to give full credit for what these men have accomplished and to give heed to any suggestions which they may make.

A first and necessary step in the conservation of our natural resources as a country is the sending of legislators to Washington who will be sufficiently alert and patriotic to prevent the spoliation of these same interests by representatives of mining, timber and water power companies. We can talk about forest preservation until we are black in the face, but it will be to little purpose until we can pass effective national laws. The truth of the above statement is pointed out in the pitiable disposal that was made of the Appalachian forest reserve bill, which was to all intents and purposes strangled or effectively emasculated through the influence of interested business corporations upon members of congress who had the fate of the bill in their hands. The upshot of the matter is that the people, the individual voters of the country, will have to begin an effective campaign along the line suggested by electing the right kind of men to represent them in congress.

Automobile manufacturers are slowly getting on to the fact that there are country folks who are just as able and quite as likely to buy machines as people of like means in the city. This was brought to notice recently by seeing an advertisement of a leading auto company in an agricultural paper. This field of country buyers has been but slightly worked, yet there are hosts of well to do farmers who might be induced to purchase an automobile if the matter were brought to their attention in an effective manner.

It takes nearly twice as many sheep, shearing the same number of pounds, to bring the revenue for the wool which was secured last year.

Careful tests conducted by the Nebraska experiment station show that skimmilk and corn at the ratio of three parts to one was a more economical ration for hogs than corn and alfalfa, corn and clover or corn and bluegrass.

Most any method of exterminating dandelions on one's lawn is about as ineffectual as trying to dip up the ocean with a teaspoon when adjoining lots mature luxuriant drops of the seed bearing down for the winds to scatter hither and yon.

Dry hardwood ashes possess a fertilizing value of 12 cents per bushel. Such ashes contain from 6 to 8 per cent of potash and from 1 to 2 per cent of phosphorus. As is the case with barnyard manure, a large portion of the fertilizing elements is lost through exposure and leaching.

If you were going to have your appendix removed you would want a competent surgeon to have charge of the job. The same thing holds true if you decide to have your dairy herd tested for tuberculosis. Hire only that veterinarian who is up to date and on to his job. From reports which come from different sections of the country, a whole lot of very coarse and worse than useless work is being done along this line.

The seemingly indirect yet powerful influence that is exerted by a large tree over a smaller one that may be in close proximity to it is shown in the fact that, while the trees may not touch either limb or leaf, the smaller will grow away from the larger, sometimes at so sharp an angle as to become really deformed. The influence of one person upon another, whether it be for good or ill, is exercised in much the same unconscious yet powerful manner.

One thing that makes the crab or knot grass so pestiferous a weed is the fact it does not get to doing business in the way of growth and expansion until after the potatoes, corn and most other garden crops are laid by. Added to this trait is the fact that it is very deep rooted and flourishes in the hottest and driest weather. About the only way to stamp the stuff out is to stir the soil thoroughly, thus germinating as many of the seeds as possible and to keep the warfare up as long as is necessary.

A Bangor (Me.) capitalist is trying to interest southern rice growers in a process which he has discovered for making paper pulp from rice straw. Samples of paper manufactured by his process seem to be of excellent quality, capable of retaining ink and suitable for many of the purposes for which paper is used. Should this proposition prove to be a practical one it will tend to relieve somewhat the demand which is made on the forests of the country in the manufacture of paper as well as utilize a product which has hitherto been wasted.

As showing how highly prized common black dirt may be under certain circumstances it is interesting to note the shipment of fifty tons of it recently from Honolulu to Midway island, 1,800 miles to the northwest, which is a mile long and forty feet above ocean level at its highest point. The earth was shipped by the Pacific Steamship company in order that its employees on the island might have some relief from the white, dazzling sands and a little soil in which to raise some garden vegetable to vary the canned food they are compelled to depend upon so largely.

Not only has it been demonstrated that the use of the surface or knife cultivator will make possible a yield of from ten to twelve bushels per acre more of corn than the common four or six shovel plow, but there is another feature which makes the former machine useful and valuable, and that is its ability to kill weeds in wet seasons by cutting them in two just below the surface and preventing their further development as would be the case were they simply stirred and loosened with the shovel plow. We have taken some pains to note the weed growth in fields in which these two types of cultivators have been used, and invariably the field in which the surface cultivator had been employed was the cleaner.

There are a good many folk who are human enough to derive considerable quiet satisfaction out of seeing the widow of some crabbed, tight fisted old codger, who begrudged her every penny he doled out to her in life, loosen up the purse strings after his demise, provide decent equipment for a respectable funeral for her spouse and incidentally blow in a little cash on her own account in securing some things that she was promised and set her heart upon when she was led as a bride to the marriage altar. A far better way than this is for the husband to show a reasonable appreciation of his wife while both he and she are alive and to exercise a becoming generosity which shall find expression in something besides odorous flowers heaped on her casket. In the second instance both enjoy the use of the money spent, while the mutual regard of one for the other is likely to be of a higher type.

Sleep...

Women and children are more apt to suffer from somnambulism than men, possibly because their brain is more delicately poised and therefore more easily influenced by dreams. A somnambulist nearly always walks with his eyes wide open, the pupils being much dilated. He is a dreamer able to act his dreams, and in this state the timid become fearless, the weak strong and the stupid brilliant. Their somnambulistic condition presents many curious anomalies. The somnambulist's sense of hearing is not often suspended, for, generally speaking, he will answer questions even if whispered, but often the same ear is deaf to loud noises. The sense of smell is frequently altered. Brimstone and phosphorus are said to be pleasant scents to the somnambulist, and many cannot tell wine from water, as the sense of taste becomes perverted or entirely suspended. Some people walk periodically in their sleep, while others do it spasmodically. One German doctor goes to the extreme of asserting that somnambulists are attracted by the moon, and thus they walk on roofs of houses and at great heights because they derive a peculiar pleasure from contemplating the moon.

A Tiny Death Dealer.

A most agonizing death is caused by an insect half the size of a pea—a small black spider. It lives in Peru, in South America, but a few specimens have reached Europe in shiploads of timber. Not long ago a dock laborer was unlucky enough to come upon one in the Victoria docks while unloading a bark. The tiny death dealer dropped upon the back of his hand and dug its fangs into his flesh. The bite itself was nothing, but as soon as the poison began to work the man fainted with pain. Soon afterward he came to and lived three days before the end came. This spider's venom scorches up the blood vessels and spreads through all the tissues, causing the most fearful agony a human being can have to bear. The worst of it is that the victim lives at least two days, enduring unthinkable anguish the whole time. This spider is luckily not common. It is known as the "specky," and when a man who knows what the bite means is bitten he generally blows out his brains.—London Chronicle.

Extreme Obedience.

The Youngs had unexpectedly dropped in on the Baileys just as dinner was about to be served. The hostess, considerably disturbed, called her little daughter Helen aside and explained that there would not be enough oysters to go around and added, "Now, you and I will just have some of the broth, and please do not make any fuss about it at the table."

Little Helen promised to remember and say nothing. But when the oysters were served Helen discovered a small oyster in her plate which had accidentally been ladled up with the broth. This puzzled the little girl, as she could not recall any instructions covering this contingency. After studying a few moments she dipped the oyster up with her spoon and, holding it up as high as she could, piped out, "Mamma, mamma, shouldn't Mrs. Young have this oyster too?"—Christian Register.

Countess Hertford's Bell.

Edward Seymour, earl of Hertford, in the days of Queen Elizabeth married as his third wife a beautiful young widow who had been engaged to Sir George Rodney, but whom she jilted for Lord Hertford. Sir George Rodney traveled to Amesbury and, putting up at the inn, awaited the homecoming of the earl and countess, who were expected to arrive the next day. The infatuated man wrote a dying ode to his fickle love, using his blood as ink, and upon the arrival of the bridal party he went out to meet them. Lady Hertford was agitated and terrified at the appearance of her old lover, and before Sir George could be prevented he drew his sword and, falling on it, expired at Lady Hertford's feet. The countess presented a bell to Amesbury church perhaps as a slight penance for her fickleness. The inscription runs:

Be strong in faythe, prayes God well,
Frances, Countess Hertford's bell.

Stars That Outshine the Sun.

One of the government astronomers, referring to stars that are so distant that they have no measurable parallax, asserts that one of these, the brilliant Canopus, can be said with confidence to be thousands of times brighter than our sun. Whether we should say 20,000, 10,000 or 5,000 no one can decide. The first magnitude stars, Rigel and Speca, also are at an immeasurable distance and must, in view of their actual brightness, enormously outshine the sun.

The 'Anged and Un'anged.

An American actor was once seeing London from the top of a bus. As they swung down the Strand he asked the driver to point out the places of interest. "Right you are, sir!" agreed the driver, touching his hat. "There's Luggit 'ill, where they 'ang 'em." A little later, "There's parliament 'ouses, where they make the laws wot does it, across the way. An' there's Westminster habbey, where they buried the good 'uns wot didn't get 'anged!"

His Only Chance.

"Why did you shake your fist at the speaker?"

"Well," replied the congressman, "I didn't want the whole session to slip by without my having made a motion of some kind."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Calmness under contradiction is demonstrative of great stupidity or strong intellect.—Zimmerman.

Sally, T. C.

By W. F. BRYAN.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Sarah Henrietta Westervelt was the name entered in the register of the ivy clad church, and in her baby days she was called Sally. But from the day her Cupid's arch of a mouth learned to frame intelligent sentences Jack Hardy had dubbed her the "town crier."

The nickname was so apt that it stuck, being reduced for simplicity's sake to T. C. Even during those stern minutes in the library with her father he often dropped the sober Sarah for the more universal T. C.

T. C.'s nickname was due to her genius for the dissemination of bits of gossip best forgotten. Her mind seemed naturally to empty itself of all information, and young Hardy altered an old saw into "What goes in T. C.'s ear comes out of her mouth."

As T. C. grew in understanding the habit got her more firmly in its grip. Instead of learning to appreciate the value of reticence, her wider scope of knowledge served only the better to equip her for the gathering of sundry bits of gossip which she would blurt out at the most inopportune occasions until not only her family, but her friends, came to regard her with an affection that was not unmixed with terror.

T. C., being a sensitive little soul, grieved in secret and made earnest vows that she would tattle no more.

HE GATHERED HER TROUBLESOME LITTLE SISTER TO HIS BREAST.

She meant to mend her ways, but at the first opportunity her store of knowledge would roll out unchecked and unrealized.

It was to Jack Hardy that she always went for sympathy and advice when these revelations and their consequences hung heavy over her head. Though Jack had given her the odious nickname, he made partial atonement by never employing it.

To him she was "Peterkin," and, though frequently he was a sufferer from her disclosures, he was ever ready with advice, sympathy or candy, as the occasion seemed to demand, for he alone apparently realized that her fault was temperamental and not the result of maliciousness.

T. C. fairly worshiped Hardy, yet all the little intimate details of his courtship of her sister Nell leaked out along with the rest of her chatter, and there were times when Hardy's forbearance was put to a hard test. It was characteristic of the man that even the personal experience did not abate his sympathy for T. C., not even when he proposed to Nell and was given a negative answer.

When Nell made hysterical reference to another girl he felt that he had T. C. to thank for this, yet his office still was her haven of refuge, and she stoutly denied that she had said anything about some other woman.

Hardy's questions had to be discreetly framed if he did not wish the fact of his rejection to become common talk, and he could not press the investigation. Instead he sought absorption in work, but the practice of a country lawyer seldom proves absorbing, and Hardy grew thin and white while he waited and hoped for a clearing up of the trouble.

He was sitting idly at his desk one afternoon when T. C. poked her head into the doorway and, finding that he was alone, entered boldly.

"What is it, Peterkin?" he asked, printing a kiss on the child's troubled face. "Have you been telling the minister what your father said when he was asked to contribute to the chancel fund, or did you explain to the guests at the party that the salad was made with canned lobster?"

"Worse 'an that," was the doleful declaration as T. C. snuggled against the broad shoulder. "The school committee visited this afternoon. Mr. Sprague asked us what love was, and I told him it was the way the principal acted with Miss Saunders. They all laughed, but Miss Squires got red in the face, and I was expelled. It is the truth," she added defiantly. "He kisses her when he thinks no one can see him, and she calls him 'Georgie.' I wouldn't call any man with whiskers 'Georgie,' like a little boy."

"Wait until you grow up," admonished Hardy. "But, see here, Peterkin, I know Mr. Torrance very well. Perhaps I can beg you off if you promise to keep out of his love affairs in future."

"You just bet I will!" declared T. C. with unction. "Lovers are funny people. There's Nell just crying her eyes out because you carry some other girl's picture in your watch."

"What do you know about that picture?" asked Hardy tensely. "Did you tell Nell about that?"

"I saw it one day when you left your watch on the desk," explained T. C. "I didn't tell Nell. I just said it was funny that you had another girl's picture in your watch when Nell's new pictures are so much prettier."

Hardy sprang up from his desk and set T. C. upon her feet.

"Look here, Peterkin," he proposed. "You take this dime and find a place where you can get ice cream soda. Don't be in too much of a hurry to drink it. Better get two. Meantime I'll slip over to the house and sort of prepare them for the news that you are expelled."

T. C. gurgled a delighted assent, and presently they emerged from the office building, and T. C. went skipping along to the candy store, while Jack made for the Westervelt home.

Nell was sitting on the shade piazza as he came up the path. As she saw him she rose to her feet, but it was too late for a graceful retreat. He sprang up the steps and caught her hand.

"Don't go in," he pleaded. "Let's sit out here. It is more pleasant."

"Shall I call father?" she asked "He is in the library."

"I hope to see him before I go," declared Hardy meaningly. "But first I want to speak to you."

Nell flushed at the suggestion, but she resumed her place in the rocker, and Jack drew a chair to her side.

"When I asked you to marry me you said something about another girl," he began, plunging directly into the subject. "At the time I suspected that T. C. might be able to explain the allusion, but I did not dare question her too closely lest I give forth more information than I obtained. She let it out today. Was it because of that other girl in my watch that you refused me, Nell?"

"No woman cares to be counted second best," was the defensive reply. "Have you changed the photograph again?"

"I have not changed," he said slowly, "but I want you to see it."

He held the watch toward her with the back case open. She saw the likeness of a gentle faced woman who somehow suggested an earlier period in spite of the modern photography. Silently she passed it back to Hardy and waited for an explanation.

"This is my father's watch," he began. "The picture is that of my mother. When she died we had only an old painting of her. Father had it copied, and they made a splendid job of it. That is why I have another woman's picture in my case. When you spoke of 'the other woman' I could not know that Sally had been investigating my watch. She found it on my desk one day. I just learned this and understood your feeling of resentment."

"I supposed that you knew and had no explanation to offer."

"And you will give me another answer now?" he asked as he gained possession of her hand.

An hour later a freckled face thrust itself above the hedge of the Westervelt lawn; then, seeing Hardy on the piazza, T. C. came boldly forward.

"Did you fix it, Jack?" she demanded. Hardy blushed.

"I was fixing another of your scrapes," he explained. "Nell, Peterkin has been expelled from school, but I have promised to see Torrance in her behalf. Meanwhile I have promised that she will not be scolded."

"I couldn't scold her this afternoon," said Nell as he gathered her troublesome little sister to her breast. "You make a great deal of trouble for people, T. C., sometimes, but then again you set them right."

"I'm not to blame that there isn't any stopper to my brain," was the aggrieved explanation. "Jack knows that. That's why he fixed things for me all right."

"You're a dear," said Nell and Jack in chorus, and for once the town crier had the comfortable feeling that she was appreciated.

Going to School In Burma.

Shortly after the native college was opened at Rangoon the head, the Rev Dr. Marks, says in the Church Family Paper that the king of Burma came to him and asked if he would teach some of his sons. When he agreed the king asked, "What ages do you like them at?"

"From twelve to fourteen."

The king turned to one of his assistants and commanded:

"Bring all my sons between twelve and fourteen to me."

Nine princes came in.

Four came to school the next day, each riding on an elephant and with two golden umbrellas. Each also was escorted by forty soldiers. Afterward the whole nine came, so there were nine princes, nine elephants, eighteen golden umbrellas and 360 soldiers.

Unlike Mary's lamb, Dr. Marks says, the elephants stayed outside, but when the princes came into the schoolroom all the other boys threw themselves flat down with their faces to the ground. It was forbidden for any one to stand or sit in the presence of princes.

Dr. Marks found this state of things very inconvenient and put the matter to the princes. They talked the situation over and made up their minds what to do.

"You fellows may get up," one of the princes said. "You need not be frightened."

"After that," says Dr. Marks, "we had very little difficulty on the score of etiquette."

THE UNDINE PICNIC.

Annual Fourth of July Gathering of Fire Fighters at Hecla Park Largely Attended.

While not as largely attended as on some of the previous years the annual picnic of the Undine Fire company at the famous Hecla park was the mecca for many Bellefonters and people throughout the valley. An early morning shower gave things a rather discouraging look and had the promise of lasting for some time. The clouds, however, soon broke and soon the sun was shining brightly. Everybody again took hope and many were soon wending their way to the popular resort. While many went in the forenoon and took their dinners along a goodly number waited till after the noon hour and then joined the crowd at the park. The rain did not spoil the day but rather had a tendency to add to the pleasures as it settled the dust and the ground being dry previously it was soon absorbed by the thirsty earth.

The leading attraction in the forenoon was the ball game between the teams from Milton and Watsontown. Quite a few of the local fans were present to witness the morning game which resulted in a score of 14 to 7 in favor of the Milton team. The forenoon game was a little disappointing to some on account of the high score but in the afternoon many more fans were on hand. The afternoon contest was a better played game and at times the score was tie adding much to the interest. The tie was broken in the eight inning when Watsontown scored three runs off a single hit and a couple wild throws. The final score was 8—4, the Watsontown team being the winners

Throughout the entire day dancing was in progress and the floor was almost filled continually. Christy's Smith's orchestra furnished the delightful music for the dancing. The Coleville concert band gave concerts during the day and there were many other attractions for the younger people. Many of the young people enjoyed themselves boating on the lake and a number of the boys kept themselves cool by swimming in the pleasant waters.

The day passed off without anything to mar the pleasures of those who attended. The crowd was very orderly which was due to the strict orders to the policemen. Only twice during the day was there any commotion and the offenders were promptly placed where they would harm no one. One of them succeeded in escaping from the improvised lock up but was soon recaptured and brough to Bellefonte on the evening train. There was very little drunkenness on the grounds which was a great credit to the Undine boys. The absence of the drunken brawls was a very noticeable feature of the picnic as Fourth of July celebrations are usually accompanied by these drunken uprisings.

A heavy rain storm shortly after the supper hour spoiled the plans for the evening program and many of the persons who intended to stay returned to their homes. It cannot be told yet just how the boys will come out but it is likely that they will be fully paid for their efforts. They succeeded in having a very sane celebration at Hecla and the people enjoyed themselves the better.

Wants Penalties Divided.

At the summer meeting of the state game commission Secretary Kalbfus submitted a report in which he recommended that there be a change in the method of dividing the penalties secured in the conviction of men for violation of the game law. He says that it is unfair to ask men to undergo the risks they do without some compensation and urges that he be given twenty trusty men, well paid. With these and the aid of the state police he is confident that he can prevent many violations. Dr. Kalbfus declared that there was a marked increase in the number of game birds and animals; that the preserves were doing splendidly and urged an appropriation of $10,000 for extension of them. He also recommeds the continuation of the act placing a bounty on foxes and noxius animals. The report attacks the foreign element which disregards the laws and commends the state police, their enlargement being recommended.

The various changes in laws recommended will be considered later in the summer.

Simpson—Garman

Dr. E. F. Simpson, of Scranton, and Mrs. Sabra Campbell Garman, of Bellefonte, were quietly married in New York City on June 13th. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Beatty, pastor of one of the leading Episcopal churches in that city. The wedding had been kept very quiet and not until Saturday did Mrs. Garman's Bellefonte friends learn of the affair, which came to them as a surprise.

The groom is a graduate of University of Pennsylvania and in one of Scranton's leading dentists. He is a son of W. T. Simpson, a prominent citizen of that place and deputy state factory inspector. Mrs. Garman is the widow of C. Bruce Garman and is so well known that further mention is not necessary. They are now enjoying a wedding trip which includes Bellefonte and while here they are being entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Knisley on Thomas street.

Bryan and the Denver Platform.

What will Mr. Bryan do? Will he nominate himself, pick the candidate for vice-president, and also dictate the platform? Mr. Roosevelt named Secretary Taft, almost nominated the candidate for vice-president, and largely shaped the platform at Chicago. This is the day of individual absolutism in politics and Mr. Bryan is just as firm in his good opinion of himself as is Mr. Roosevelt Therefore it is a safe assumption that he will name the ticket and try to write the platform. He did it all in 1900, at Kansas City, and was in touch with the convention by special wire as Mr. Roosevelt was with the Chicago convention last week.

There are signs, however, that Mr. Bryan will meet with opposition in his platform making. Eastern and Southern Democrats are going to Denver to protest against a platform which will embody all of Mr. Bryan's ideas. On the question of the tariff there may not be any great difference of opinion between Mr. Bryan and those Democrats who oppose him. They will probably be able to agree on a plank going further than the Redublican platform and favoring revising the tariff to a "revenue basis." Even such a declaration may, however, be found hardly strong enough to meet the party ideas, since under falling revenues and increased expenditures the present tariff may not be able to supply the necessary revenue for the present fiscal year and Representative Payne of New York has already predicted a sale of Government notes to meet a possible deficit in the Treasury.

He will want the trusts destroyed by means of putting all trust-made goods on the free list. He will want the Government to insure private deposits in national banks. He will want an income tax and an inheritance tax to hit swollen fortunes. He will want the convention to favor the popular election of United State Senators. He will want a Federal license for corporations engaged in interstate business. He will want any corporation that controls fifty per cent of the production of a single article declared a a monopoly. He will insist on the La Follette scheme for the physical valuation of railways. He will declare against stock gambling and stock watering and he will insist on a more complete governmental supervision of interstate railroads and a more complete state supervision of state railroads.

Mr. Bryan will also seek to have refusal of the Republican Convention to favor the scheme for publicity of campaign contributions accentuated and made a feature of his platform. He would make it unlawful for a corporation to contribute to campaign funds and would compel the publication of all contributions above a "reasonable minimum."—American Industries for July.

Editor Speaks for the Boys.

Twenty-two boys were recently arrested in the borough of Patton for bathing in Chest creek within the borough limits. Their arrest was followed by imprisonment in the borough lock-up. This forced the editor of the Courier to write a pretty severe editorial in defense of the boy of the present and his harmless recreation.

"A boy is much better off spending an hour a day in the water than he is spending an hour a day loafing around hotels, saloons or tobacco stores. Have the boy develop physical power by swimming, walking, hunting, etc., and keep in mind that innocent pleasure should be encouraged in the boy in order that he may not be led into paths of wickedness. Who wants his boy to see nothing, hear nothing or do nothing. The boy that plays marbles, swings in the grapevines swing, rolls the hoop, patronizes the "Old Swimming Hole," goes to the circus whenever it visits the town, is just as likely to make a good pushing man as is the boy who is masked for fear some reflection of the sins of life might be thrust into his face.

If the boy wants to swm let him swim and if your modesty is shocked by his forwardness wear green glasses until the frosts of November come and the season for swimming closes."

Good Spelling.

An interesting feature of the recent National Teachers Association convention at Cleveland was a spelling contest in which a team of fifteen pupils representing each of four cities took part. The eighth grade Cleveland schools challenged the schools of the country in a spelling match and the gauntlet thus thrown down was taken up by New Orleans, Pittsburg and Erie. In this orthographic match the members of the teams were mixed and the contestants were known by a number only. First there was a written contest of one hundred words and then oral spelling of about 250 words. Cleveland won with a total of thirty-eight errors. Pittsburg was second with only forty-seven errors. New Orleans third with sixty-six, and Erie fourth, with eighty-five. Two girls, Mae Thursby, of Pittsburg, and Marie Bolden, of Cleveland, had perfect scores. Three missed but one word. Miss Bolden is a colored girl.

—So long as a man isn't miserable he ought to be happy.

—We have been having the good old summer time in earnest.

—Silence may be golden, but it is often an indication of guilt.

—It is said that girls who live in glass houses should pull down the blinds.

—Wealth may not bring happiness, but it gathers a lot of smiling faces about you.

—Many a man tries to get out of paying as he goes because he doesn't expect to come back.

—Mrs. Wm. Dawson is having the old pavement at her residence on the corner of Spring and Bishop streets replaced by a neat and substantial flag stone pavement.

—Many of the farmers have been busy this week cutting their wheat and especially during the past few days we have seen where numerous fields were cut and shocked.

—Blair county is at present suffering from drouth and some of the crops which were so promising a few weeks ago will suffer materially unless rain comes soon.

—Many writers in the newspapers are telling us how to know a mad dog, but most of us do not care to know a mad dog. A sensible man will avoid his acquaintance.

—It appears that the Duke of Abruzzi is conducting his courtship with a sweet American girl over the cable. American young men prefer a hammock and a shady nook.

—Samuel Rice, who was brought to his home here last week after having suffered several paralytic strokes, is slowly improving and with a little assistance is able to walk around.

—In the two cases at Howard in which two men were prosecuted for hauling calves with their legs tied the defendants were fined $10 a piece and the costs. One of the men promptly paid his fine and costs and the other has appealed the case to court.

—Some time ago a young man left an overcoat at the photograph gallery of C. A. Glenn on Water street and never returned for it. He is requested to call for the same and pay for this notice, or the coat will be disposed of for storage and advertising. d3t R1.

—The many housewives who were counting on putting up so much fruit and berries because of the plenteous supply and the prospective low price are now finding out that the glass jar men have increased the price of the jars and canning will cost as much as in other years.

—Roy Gonser, aged seventeen years, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Gonser, of Lewisburg was drowned in the river at that place Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock. In company with another young man he attempted to swim across a deep channel and failed, drowning before aid reached him.

—The borough council of Punxsutawney has passed an ordinance requiring the telephone and electric companies operating in the town to paint their poles white. This step was taken to improve the looks of the streets. This was a bright idea and a coat of paint would greatly improve some of the homely looking telephone poles in this place.

—Edward Moore, a lifelong resident of Lamar, Clinton county, died at the home of his son, Calvin Moore, in the east end of Nittany valley Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, aged 88 years. He is survived by four sons and three daughters. The funeral was held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. M. B. Bubb, pastor of Salona M. E. church officiating, and burial was made at Cedar Hill.

—Probably the largest boost in votes that Taft will receive from a single family is that of John M. Chase, who, when he lived voted for Lincoln in Lawrence township, Clearfield county. His first vote was for Lincoln and he was the only voter in the Chase family. From him decended a family of more than 40 voters, and there are other prospective Republicans who are near relatives of the family.

—During the present and the coming months there will be comparatively little public interest in political matter. But by September the situation will brighten up and politics will have the right of way. Until then let us take our ease.

—Judge Hart of the Lycoming county court has suspended sentence for thirty days in the case of William Wright, whose mother and sister petitioned the court to have him sent to some institution to restrain him from drinking. He now has a chance to choose between liquor and the Danville asylum.

—At a meeting of the School board of Howard borough the other evening Miss Anna Muffly was elected to teach the grammar school, Miss Susie Pletcher the intermediate and Miss Lulu Stover of Mill Hall, the primary. The election of the principal was postponed until a later meeting.

—Miss Elizabeth McCloskey, daughter of Superintendent Ira N. McCloskey, of Lock Haven, was on the program at the State Teachers meeting at State College Wednesday afternoon for several select readings and a recitation. Miss McCloskey is a gifted elocutionist and her efforts were thoroughly appreciated.

—Many sections of Columbia county gave evidences Tuesday morning that the community had been visited by a plague of toads. Toads by the millions, coming in the minds of the more fanciful, from the skys, fairly covered every place upon which they could get a footing. They were so thick on West Berwick pavements that pedestrains were compelled to take to the streets. Much the same conditions existed in Bloomsburg.

—After having tested over two hundred samples of canned preparations of meat, etc., Agent Banzhoff, of the dairy and food department has collected a number of samples of jarred goods, pickles, mustards, olives, etc., and sent them to Dr. Wm. Frear at State College for analysis. There have been rumors to the effect that some of the pickled goods are put up in vinegar which does not come up to the standard set by the law, and if such is the case prosecutions will follow.

—Just as he started to leave the harvest field during a heavy electrical storm Edward Eichenlaub, of near Hughesville was struck by lightning and instantly killed Tuesday morning. The bolt struck him on the head, burning a hole through his hat and passing through his body burned away a portion of his shoe. He is the second member of the family to meet death in a tragic way within a year, his father having been stricken with apoplexy while taking a walk and the body was found in a snow drift. The dead man was about 20 years old and unmarried.

—Much appears in the papers from time to time that is not complimentary to many of the Italians that are within our borders. It is, therefore, specially gratifying whenever anything can be said that places them in a better light. This can be done in reference to the industrious toilers of Italy in Erie. The Erie Times says: "A good share of the money set apart by Erie Italians for a fireworks display was used instead as a donation for the poor. The money which would have gone up in smoke and sparks was sent to the relief of destitute families in the city and by so doing the Italians celebrated the Fourth of July in the most effective, substantial manner possible."

—Four electric bagge trucks for use at large railway terminals, the first vehicles of the kind ever made in the United States, and representing several years of study and experimenting upon the part of the Pennsylvania Railroad officials, will be turned out of the Altoona shops in a few days, and will be sent to different points along the Pennsy line for use. The new trucks are the first of a lot of twelve which are being constructed in the Altoona shops for use in the Pennsy system. The new trucks are 9 feet long, 42 inches wide and 39 inches high to the floor. They are made with a steering apparatus at both ends and will make the handling of the large amounts of baggage much easier and less dangerous than the old way of pulling trucks by hand.

—Dog days began on Saturday.

—Dr. Thomas C. VanTries filled the pulpit at the United Brethren church at the morning service Sunday.

—Ex-postmaster Harry C. Waifel has been appointed a justice of the peace for the borough of Philipsburg to fill the unexpired term of H. H. Gunther deceased.

—The Philadelphia and Erie pay car came in over the L. & T. road this morning, having made the regular monthly pay to the employes along that road.

—The big paper mill of the New York and Pennsylvania company at Lock Haven will resume operations on Monday. The mill had been shut down for ten days to make necessary improvements This wat the first time it had been shut down for years.

—The temperance forces at Brockwayville, headed by the Anti-Saloon league, have started a movement against the speakeasies in the town. Several places have been raided and over 100 persons have been subpoenaed to appear. Brockwayville is a local option town.

—Bloomsburg now has a dog catcher who will doubtless get rid of many of the worthless curs in the town. Amos Welliver is the man and he is after the dogs with a shot gun. He is to receive $1.50 a day and 50 cents for every dog he buries and says he intends to make good wages at it.

—Passengers on the Altoona accommodation which leaves Tyrone at 6 30 in the evening had a narrow escape from injury the other evening. Shortly after the train left the Spruce Creek station a stone about as large as a man's hand crashed through one of the windows, and was evidently thrown by some person. The glass was scattered about the car over several of the passengers but fortunately no one was injured.

—Close application to his duties at the Bellefonte Academy has made it necessary for Prof. James R. Hughes to devote some time to outdoor exercise and recreation and as a means of promoting his health he has purchased John Shugert's dun driving mare. Since becoming the owner of this animal he has been taking daily drives and rides which have proved quite beneficial to him. His father, the Rev. James P. Hughes, is frequently seen astride the little favorite and rides with the ability of any youth and the dignity of a great military man.

—One of the prettiest and most interesting pictures ever shown in Bellefonte was the "Legend of the Ghost" which appeared at the Electric theatre Thursday evening. It was a beautiful hand colored film and was about a thousand feet long. The children were delighted with the scenes presented to them in this picture and the older people admired it as a work of art. "The Blue Bonnet" was also a picture full of interest and one that carried with it an important lesson. The management of the Electric announce that they will endeavor to continue showing these high class pictures.

—It is stated that the Travelers Protective Association of America will make a demand for the use of steel fireproof cars to be used on all the railroads in the United States. The fact that a large percentage of the loss of life and limb on railroads is due to the telescoping and burning of cars in train wrecks which renders it impossible to release the victims, is the cause for this demand. However, it is the opinion of a prominent car builder that agitation and legislation will not be needed, as the age of steel in passenger car construction and equipment has arrived The railroads are advancing and developing along this ling as rapidly as circumstances will permit.

—Allentown recently had on its hands twenty friendless and neglected street dogs, which it was necessary to get rid of in some way. Referring to the situation the Stroudsburg Daily Times says: "At a bargain sale of impounded dogs at Allentown a few days ago only two canines were disposed of each bringing $2. This is a bad season for buying dogs, 'tis true; but the real reason why the eighteen leftovers at Allentown were not wanted was because they were not worth having, even as gifts, for they would gladly have been given away, if assured of proper care, rather than slaughtered. A community is well rid of such kinds of dogs; for the curs can do nothing but mischief, and because of their poor breeding are naturally inclined in that direction."

—That William Steele Jr., is fast developing into an architect of some merit was demonstrated when he submitted plans to Mrs. Laura Kephart, of Unionville, for a fifteen-room dwelling house and which were accepted without a single change. —A great many of the exchanges which come to this office are complaining about the reckless manner in which automobile drivers go pounding through the towns and villages. While it is a fact that in many places there is too much fast driving Bellefonte is practically free from autos which run at a dangerous speed. Considering the large number of of machines in town and the lack of any accident is proof of the concern of Bellefonte autoists for others. Some of the fast drivers seem to think that every time they blow their honk all the pedestians of the street should climb the trees or telephone poles, and it is more good luck than good management that there are not more accidents in some towns on account of reckless driving.
